THE LATEST.

Senator Tillman spoke on the Brownsville incident in the Senate yesterday. He characterized the President's action in the matter "as nothing more nor less than lynching." He challenged anyone to produce in the army regulations or articles of war any foundation for the charge of conspiracy of silence, mutiny and treason made against the soldiers, although he declared there was no doubt that these soldiers were responsible for the "outrage at Brownsville." The Senator was interrupted many times by other members, who questioned him closely on the ground for his racial opinions.

Serious trouble and possibly bloodshed may result at Prestonsburg tomorrow when the County Court will hear the first move in the effort to get thousands of acres of land under land grants issued over 100 years ago by the State of Virginia. It is said 1,500 armed men will swarm into the little town determined to protect their property with firearms if they think it necessary. A similar hearing will be held at Pikeville, Tuesday, and fears of trouble are entertained there. It is estimated that fully 3,000 armed men will be on hand there.

The disappearance of John Smith from Jackson has caused no alarm to the attorneys for the prosecution in the Hargis case, who think they will be able to find him when they need him. Smith said before leaving Jackson that threats had been made against him and he did not think it safe to remain in town. According to reports prevalent in Breathitt more surprises are coming for the defense in the Hargis case and some of Hargis' former staunch friends are deserting him.

In a special message sent to Congress yesterday, President Roosevelt urges immediate action by the United States Government in aiding in the work of restoring the Colorado river to its original channel, pointing out that unless the stream is diverted from the Imperial Valley of lower California immense property losses will result. He estimates that $2,000,000 is a sufficient amount for the necessary emergency work.

By an agreement reached yesterday by the engineers and managers of all railroads west of Chicago to the Pacific, salaries will be increased to an aggregate of between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000 yearly and between 15,000 and 20,000 men will be affected. The agreement reached was a compromise, the employees withdrawing their demand, among others, for an eight-hour day.

Mrs. Irene Steele, of Chicago, yesterday identified as her husband's the scraps of clothing found after J. Rolfe Steele had thrown a bomb in the Fourth-street National Bank, of Philadelphia, killing himself and Cashier McClear. Mrs. Steele will testify at the Coroner's inquest.

In the handsome Chicago mansion of Mrs. Potter Palmer the American Civic Federation and representatives of various labor organizations met last night for a discussion of the abolition of labor troubles. Addresses were made by several notable leaders of both sides.

That the breeding and race track interests of Tennessee soon will be wiped out is the belief expressed by leading turfmen of Nashville as a result of the practical assurance that the anti-race betting bill will pass during the present session of the Tennessee Legislature.

William S. Taylor, the Kentucky fugitive living in Indiana, has been warned of an alleged Socialist attempt to kidnap him for a reward of $1,000, said to have been offered by a Socialist newspaper published in Indianapolis.

TRAINS DELAYED BY SNOWSTORMS

MUCH UNEASINESS FELT FOR PASSENGERS.

DRIFTS TEN FEET HIGH ON THE GREAT NORTHERN.

SOO LINE BADLY BLOCKED.

St. Paul, Jan. 12.—As yet there is no relief in sight for the Western railroads. Continued snowstorms are filling the tracks in North Dakota and Montana with such drifts that it is almost impossible to get trains through. Drifts are ten feet high on each side, and the snow accumulates faster than it can be shoveled away. All the roads have special crews and snow plows working night and day to clear the tracks, but with the terrific winds continuing, it will be impossible to get the right of way so that it will admit of passage.

The Great Northern No. 2, due here three days ago at 10 p. m., is still reported indefinitely late, and it is not known when it will get through. Train No. 2, of Thursday, is also tied up somewhere in North Dakota, as is the same train of each succeeding day, and they are all indefinitely late. Considerable anxiety is experienced in St. Paul for the passengers on trains which have been stalled two or three days in the wilds of North Dakota, but fuel and provisions are being provided by the neighboring villages, and also by relief trains, so that there has been no report of suffering as yet.

Two other trains on the Great Northern are also reported indefinitely late, and they are sandwiched in somewhere between the other coast trains. The blizzards are the worst that have been experienced on the line in the history of the road. On the Soo line conditions are not much better.

Names Special Judges.
Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 12.—[Special.]—Gov. Becham today appointed Maj. D. W. Sanders, of Louisville, to preside in the Bell Circuit Court, and Judge J. A. Daugherty, of Owensville, to preside in the Elliott Circuit Court, as Special Judges in certain cases.

GUARANTEED STOMACH REMEDY.

T. P. Taylor & Co. Will Refund Money if Mi-o-na Fails to Cure.

You may ask why it is that Mi-o-na stomach tablets are sold by T. P. Taylor & Co. under a guarantee to refund the money unless they cure when no other treatment for stomach troubles is sold in this manner.

The answer is simple and conclusive. Other medicines for stomach troubles merely digest the food, while Mi-o-na strengthens the whole digestive system so that it soon becomes able to care for all the food that is eaten.

If you do not use your arm or leg for a month the muscles become flabby and weak, and you have to resort to artificial help. It is the same way with the stomach muscles. If they are not used they become so weak that it is necessary to continue using a digestive with the food you eat.

On the other hand, when you use Mi-o-na your stomach soon grows so strong that you can give up the use of medicine.

Mi-o-na costs 50c a box, and does more real good than a dozen boxes of ordinary digestive tablets. The proof of this is shown in the fact that a guarantee, absolute and unqualified, is given by T. P. Taylor & Co. with every box of Mi-o-na.

PATROLMEN AND CLERK PURSUE OVERCOAT THIEF.

"Mike" Lovines Said To Have Appropriated Garment Found On Him When Arrested.

After pursuit of five squares "Mike" Lovines, aged forty-three years, was arrested by Patrolmen Lee and Granger yesterday afternoon and lodged in jail, charged with grand larceny. Lovines, it is alleged, made a sneaking visit into the office of the Perfect Five Stupper Company, at 420 E. Ford street, and appropriated an overcoat, valued at $32 and belonging to W. G. Rau, a member of the firm. As the alleged sneak thief left the place he was observed by a clerk, and with a cry of "Stop thief," the clerk ran after Lovines, who "took wings into himself" and figuratively flew up the street.

The clerk, however, was not daunted by the rapid pace set him, and followed closely. During the pursuit he kept up a continual cry for help, and thereby attracted the attention of the patrolmen, who joined in the chase. A spirited race now followed. Down the street and up an alley the men ran, and after a race of five squares the patrolmen placed their hands on Lovines and locked him up. The stolen coat was found on him when he was taken into custody.

RUSSIAN PIANIST, LHEVINNE, SUCCESSOR TO STRAUSS.

Lhevinne, the great Russian pianist, who is to be heard here for the first time on January 21, at the opening of the Musical Art Society, comes direct from the East, where he has been on tour as soloist with the Philadelphia Orchestra. When Richard Strauss, the composer of "Salome," accepted an invitation to visit this country for the first presentation of his opera, the Philadelphia Orchestra engaged him for a series of concerts in Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington. Later, Dr. Muck's engagement by the Boston Symphony Orchestra necessitated a change in Dr. Strauss' plans. The Philadelphia Orchestra was forced to look about for a soloist figure in the music world to take Strauss' place, and the choice fell upon Lhevinne, whose tremendously successful debut in New York last season marked him out as the sensational figure in the music world this season.

Child Cremated In House.
Cattletown, Ky., Jan. 12.—[Special.]—The home of John Tison, near here, burned to the ground last night. A child four years old was burned to death, and the father may die as a result of burns received. Heroic efforts were made to save the child.

VALUABLE LAND IN DANGER.

The whole enterprise and the spirit of those promoting it, as well as of the numerous smaller speculators attracted to the subsidiary organizations, were of the most visionary character. Actual investments made have been small in proportion to estimates of wealth which appeared to be possible of realization.

The company entered upon its construction work with large plans, but with inadequate capital. All of its structures for the control and distribution of water were temporary in character, being built

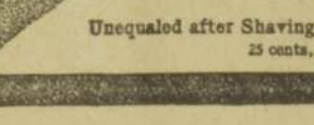

If you are suffering from piles we make no charge for a trial package of the Pyramid Pile Cure. This sample will relieve the itching, soothe the inflamed membrane and start you on the way to health. After you have used the sample go to the druggist for a box of the remedy, which contains suppositories just like the sample we are sending you. Write and relieve your suffering. It costs you nothing. Pyramid Drug Co., 75 Pyramid Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

The meeting was called for the purpose of selecting the place for holding the next State Farmers' Institute, and to discuss important matters in connection with the work of the board, notably the taking of steps looking to securing a permanent site at Louisville for the next State delegation of Shelbyville citizens will attend to urge the selection of that place for the State Institute meeting.

At the close of the conference the physicians returned to the operating room, the door of which was also guarded, accompanied by Capt. Hendricks, while Col. Gunther drove away in his phaeton. Detectives Martin Donahue and Charles Ross patrolled the halls or held frequent telephone conversations with police and detective headquarters. Mr. Boden's offices were occupied by J. William Bonmar, Mrs. Carl Sutton, a cousin of the dead girl, and Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Logsdon, and Mrs. Boden's friends. A constantly changing crowd filled the lawn and the street before the building.

backed up to the carb and the horses pawed nervously. Capt. Hendricks and Mr. Bomar hurried from the building and, jumping into a waiting buggy, drove rapidly away. The news ran from group to group that the railroad pany has secured control of the Pikeville Plain Dealer, and the "Virginia Grangers" have launched the Pikeville Plain Talker, and each is trying to court favor with the people by all sorts of promises through these papers.

ARMED MEN TO BE AT HEARING

The "Virginia Grangers" company is represented, and it is claimed has been organized, by the Hon. John G. Carlisle, Gen. Jack Hendrick, Judge James H. Hazelrigg and Congressman F. A. Hopkins, while the Northern Coal and Coke Company has such legal talent representing it as Judge James Goble and Walter S. Harkins, of this city, together with the law firm of Hager & Stewart, of Ashland. With these counsel opposing each other, coupled with the fact that the value of the property in controversy will reach far into the millions of dollars, it is but natural to expect a hot legal battle.

LOOKS SERIOUS AT PIKEVILLE.

Hearing of Cases in That County Comes Up Tuesday.

Paintsville, Ky., Jan. 12.—[Special.]—The Paintsville Herald, in its current number, says:

The prediction is freely made that at least three thousand people will be in Pikeville on next Tuesday, the day set for passing on the question of letting the Virginia land grants, recently revived, for taxation and for redemption of past tax.

The hearing is to be before County Judge J. W. Ford.

It is said those whose property is in question will march into Pikeville strong and determined. There is no concealing the fact that grangers have been around the action of a few designing men, who are attempting to wrest from the good citizens of Pike county their birthright—take from them homes they have made and enjoyed for an hundred years.

The move to revive the old Virginia land grant is wrapped in much mystery. Nothing is definitely known save that Jack Hendrick is chief promoter of the enterprise, and, strange to say, is assisted by a few men of Pikeville. It is said the scheme has a "syndicate" giving it financial backing; this one John Smalhouse, of New York, bought up the old grants; and, backed by the "syndicate," with Jack Hendrick as chief attorney and schemer, assisted by a few little fellows at Pikeville, it is hoped to push matters to a successful issue. All kinds of rumors are afloat. It is reported that Congressman Frank Hopkins is acting as attorney for the "claimants," taking charge of the movement in Floyd county, which, like Pike, has the same proposition to deal with. But the Herald, while not agreeing with Mr. Hopkins' policy, has a high regard for him personally, and is loath to believe he would for a moment countenance a movement having for its purpose the taking away of the homes of his fellow-citizens. We are rather inclined to the belief that Mr. Hopkins' name became connected with the movement because of the fact that Tom Hatcher, who was killed by the "Hendrick" private secretary, had Hopkins been returned to Congress, is a very conspicuous figure in the affair.

Tom Hatcher, according to reports, has made a "good thing" out of the scheme, having been busily engaged abstracting titles at Pikeville and at Frankfort, getting all information obtainable for the use of Jack Hendrick and his cohorts.

Failure Predicted.

The result of the attempt to take this land is known in advance. It will fail. There working at the scheme have no hope of success, the salary they are receiving amply compensating them for their trouble. Over in West Virginia the same attempt was made on an old Virginia grant. The question got into the courts, the schemers made affidavit after

Pimples Stopped In 5 Days

Every Possible Skin Eruption Cured
In Marvellously Quick Time By the New Calcium Treatment.

Send For Free Sample Package To-day

Bella has been cured in 3 days, and some of the worst cases of skin disease have been cured in a week by the wonderful action of Stuart's Calcium Waters. These waters contain as their main ingredient the most thorough, quick and effective blood-cleanser known, calcium sulphide.

Most treatments for the blood and skin are of the nature of a "band-aid" in their results, and, besides, many of them are poisonous. Stuart's Calcium Waters, on the other hand, are harmless, and do work which cannot fail to surprise you. They are the most powerful blood purifier and skin clearer ever discovered, and they never derange the system.

No matter what you suffer from—pimples, blackheads, acne, red rash, spots, blotches, rash, tetter or any other skin eruption—you can get rid of them long before other treatments can even begin to show results.

Don't go around with a haggard, disfigured mass of pimples and blotches on your face. A face covered over with these disgusting things makes people turn away from you and breeds failure in your life work. Stop it. Read what an Iowa man said when he wrote up one morning and found he had a new face.

"By George, I never saw anything like it. There I've been for three years trying to get rid of pimples and blackheads, and guess I used everything under the sun. I used your Calcium Waters for just seven days, and the next morning every blessed pimple is gone and I can't find a blackhead. I could write you a volume of thanks, I am so grateful to you."

You can depend upon this treatment being a never-failing cure. Just send us your name and address in full to-day, and we will send you a trial package of Stuart's Calcium Waters free. After you have tried the sample and been convinced that all we say is true you will go to your nearest druggist and get a box and be cured of your facial trouble. They are in tablet form and no trouble what, over to take. You go about your work as usual, and there you are—cured and happy.

Send us your name and address to-day and we will at once send you by mail a sample package free. Address: F. A. Stuart Co., 55 Stuart bldg., Marshall, Mich.

Used To Dupe Unwary.

The Walcott patent has never disturbed the peace of our citizens, but "traders" have used it to great advantage. These hands of people have been duped into purchasing tracts of land originating from the Walcott patent. Purchasers were led to believe this section a wilderness and the hands "wild lands." They found out the correct solution by coming here and investigating the status of their title.

It is as impossible to locate the beginning corner of the old Virginia grants as it is to forecast the result of the next Republican primary election in Johnson county.

And while the people of Johnson county have not had cause to worry about the old Walcott grant, still, as a matter of fact, the Walcott grant has, in some respects retarded the development of the resources in that county. It has kept them from making them for to invest here because of what they suppose to be the mixed condition of our land titles.

It is as natural as rolling off of a log for the people to become aroused when they think their land holdings in jeopardy. It is natural the people of Pike and Floyd counties, under the present circumstances, should have a valid title to their land. It is natural the people of Pike and Floyd counties, under the present circumstances, should have a valid title to their land.

A large crowd of farmers from every section of the county was in the city today. There was no demonstration of any kind, and it is freely predicted that to-day's meeting of the association and independent tobacco growers

MRS. CATHERINE CORCORAN
DIES AT ADVANCED AGE.

Came To America From Ireland and
Had Resided In Louisville
For Many Years.

Mrs. Catherine Corcoran, widow of James Corcoran, aged seventy-two years, died of cardiac asthma at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the family residence, 205 West Jefferson street, after an illness for the greater part of a year, during which her health failed steadily. Mrs. Corcoran was a native of Ireland, but came to America with her parents when very young. She was known and beloved by all who came within the sphere of her influence, and in cases of sickness and sorrow was a most comforting and helpful presence.

She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Mary Corcoran and Mrs. Charles Byrne. Mrs. Corcoran was a native of Ireland, but came to America with her parents when very young. She was known and beloved by all who came within the sphere of her influence, and in cases of sickness and sorrow was a most comforting and helpful presence.

POOLING TIME HAS EXPIRED

Burley Committee To Hold
Meeting On Tuesday.

Will Perfect Details of the Organization.

Growers Organizing In Various Counties.

OLIVE BRANCH IN CALDWELL.

Winchester, Ky., Jan. 12.—[Special.]—The time for pooling tobacco with the Burley growers' organization expired to-night. A final meeting of the Clark county growers was held here this afternoon, at which time about one hundred acres was pledged, besides what has been pooled since the time was extended.

The meeting of the Executive Committee here Tuesday will be a most important one, and the details of the organization will be perfected at that time, as well as the time, place and manner of receiving the pledged tobacco, the grading and the insurance, and above all, the question of financing the crop. The Executive Committee, or a portion of it, was in Louisville this week consulting the warehousemen there in regard to the matter, and while they are willing to help, no arrangements have yet been made. Capitalists of Cincinnati are also willing to aid, under certain restrictions. All these questions will come up for discussion here next week, and much of the success of the movement depends on what is done then.

Reports from a number of counties which were unorganized at the last meeting indicate that much has been done since that time, and large quantities have been pledged in such counties as Bath, Bourbon and Montgomery.

GETTING TOGETHER.
Factions in Caldwell County Adopt
Pacific Resolutions.

Princeton, Ky., Jan. 12.—[Special.]—As a result of the conference committee held here yesterday, the Caldwell County Tobacco Association by County Chairman John W. Hollowell, the following proclamation was read and unanimously adopted by the association at a meeting this afternoon.

To the People of Caldwell County: For the past two years we have been making a struggle to get our tobacco sold on a basis of equality. We feel that in this struggle we were entitled to the aid and sympathy of every citizen, who believes in fairness and justice and especially those engaged in the tobacco business. We feel that it is the duty of every farmer who raises tobacco to join the association, and to make a valid title to his tobacco. However, we deplore any conflict between tobacco growers and farmers, and we deplore the situation in this county between tobacco-growing farmers and the people of the county. We feel that it is the duty of every farmer who raises tobacco to join the association, and to make a valid title to his tobacco.

IN MEMORIAM.
Resolutions of Regret For the Death of Mrs. T. L. Burnett, State Regent of the Daughters of the Revolution.

Jan. 9, 1907.
It having pleased an all-wise Providence to call home our beloved State Regent, Elizabeth Gilbert Burnett, we, the members of the Daughters of the Revolution, Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution, meet to-day to pass resolutions of regret for the death and to express the sympathy of the members of the chapter and collectively we loved and revered her.

Therefore, be it Resolved, That we express our heartfelt sympathy to her bereaved family.

Be it further Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be placed upon the minutes and a copy sent the local press.

WILLIAM SCOTT DYER,
Secretary Daughters Chapter, D. R.

In Memory of John P. Gray, Who Departed This Life January 14, 1906.

A precious one from us has gone,
Whom we cherished and loved so dear,
A voice we loved is stilled;
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.

God, in His wisdom, has recalled
The boon His love has given;
And though the body moldered here,
The soul is with Him in heaven.

WIFE AND CHILDREN.

In Memory of Our Beloved Father,
Henry E. Brockman, Who Departed
This Life January 13, 1906.

God called you home to dwell with Him
One year ago to-day.
O father, was a sad, sad hour
When you were called away.
When you were called away,
We knew we never would see you again.
Though one long year has passed away,
We fondly love you still.

BEREAVED FAMILY.

In Memory of William Kleinjohn,
Who Died January 10, 1906.

One precious one to our hearts is gone,
The vessel we loved is laid to rest,
The place made vacant in our home
Can never more be filled.
God, in His wisdom, has recalled
The boon His love has given;
And though the body moldered here,
The soul is with Him in heaven.

FROM WIFE AND CHILDREN.

In Loving Remembrance of Our Beloved Husband and Father, Fred
G. Von Hoven, Who Died January
9, 1906.

One sad year since papa left us,
When we cherished and loved so dear,
We miss him still, but we are glad,
We can help but feel so lonely.
When we were called away,
We knew we never would see you again.
Though one long year has passed away,
We fondly love you still.

FROM HIS WIFE AND CHILDREN.

In Memory of Frank G. Umbreit,
Who Died January 14, 1906.

One year ago
His soul to God he gave it rose;
God led it to its long repose,
And though his life's sun has set,
His light shall shine forever in our hearts.
Bright, radiant, kind for his PARENTS AND SISTERS.

In Memory of Catherine Kluck, Who Died January 16, 1904.

Dearest mother, though you have left us,
We do not lose you deeply feel,
But God has kept you near,
And we shall see you soon.

LOVING DAUGHTER, LENA ANTWINE.

Card of Thanks.
We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks for the kindness and sympathy shown us during the bereavement of our beloved son and brother, Fred Krill, Jr. We also thank the Rev. William Mohr for his kind words, the pallbearers, the members of Banner Council, No. 20, Jr. C. A. M., and also the many friends for the beautiful floral offerings.

MR. AND MRS. FRED KRILL, SR.,
AND FAMILY.

Card of Thanks.
We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks to the many friends and relatives for their kindness and sympathy shown us during the illness and bereavement of our beloved father, Mr. Frederick Roth, who died Sunday, January 13, 1907, at his home, 112 1/2 Ave., near Weisenger-Gaubert building.

TEXAS BOOMING.

Distribution of 1,000,000 Acres To Begin Soon.

LAND VALUES IN LONE STAR STATE HIGHER.

COMMONWEALTH STILL OWNS OVER 12,000,000 ACRES.

IMMENSE TRACT TO BE SOLD.

Austin, Tex., Jan. 12.—[Special.]—Whenever the United States Government opens up a new reservation for settlement there is widespread ado made over it. The placing upon the market of a tract of 500,000 acres of land of the Federal domain attracts much attention. In Texas, it would be considered a mere trifle; a pretty good-sized ranch, to be sure, but there are several individual private tracts in this State much larger than that in area. Texas owns her own domain. The Federal Government has never owned a foot of the soil of the State, except that which it has acquired for its army posts and other purposes.

This State has been going out of the land business for several years. During the last four years J. J. Terrell, State Land Commissioner, has sold more than 5,000,000 acres of public lands to actual settlers, and between January 1 and July 1 of the present year an additional 1,000,000 acres will be placed upon the market. The demand for these State lands is enormous. The public lands have never been advertised throughout the country that such lands were open for settlement, the influx of settlers have come from almost every State in the Union. Notwithstanding the fact that several million acres of land have been sold during the last four years, the State still owns about 12,000,000 acres of land, which will be sold as fast as the leases on it expire. These leases are held by cattlemen, the land being used for grazing purposes. Much of the unsold land is in what is known as the semi-arid belt, but during the winter or four years as crop seasons have been excellent, even in that dry section, and land values have greatly increased on account of this improved condition.

It was only by rare good fortune that Texas retained her heritage of public lands, which have been the basis for the splendid public school system now in force in this State. The original treaty of annexation provided that the Republic of Texas should surrender her public lands to the United States. This treaty failed, and the United States Senate, subsequently, annexation was perfected under federal resolution, by the terms of which Texas retained all of her public domain and relinquished her claim to the northwestern territory described in the original boundaries of the republic, which extended north through what is now Colorado and to what is now Wyoming. In consideration of her claim to that excess territory the State was paid the sum of $10,000,000 by the United States.

Boundaries Defined.

The western boundary of the Spanish province of Texas was the Nueces river and a vaguely defined line extending northward. The republican constitution of 1824 of Mexico combined the provinces of Coahuila and Texas into one State with the same boundaries they had as provinces. A decree of the constitutional congress of Coahuila and Texas in 1824 and the constitution of the latter State in 1827 declared that the separate boundaries of Coahuila and Texas should remain the same as when they were provinces.

The first Congress of the Texas Republic ignored the acts which had fixed the boundary of the domain and did some fudging which it successfully backed up afterward. This first Congress passed an act which was approved by President Sam Houston December 19, 1836, extending the civil and political jurisdiction of the republic from the mouth of the Sabine river along the Gulf of Mexico to the mouth of the Rio Grande, thence along that river to its source, and from that point due north to the 42d degree of north latitude, and thence along the boundary line as defined in the treaty between the United States and Spain to the beginning.

Under the terms of that act of Congress the area of Texas included, besides its present area, 65,000 square miles of territory of New Mexico, 19,000 square miles of Colorado, 7,700 square miles of Kansas, 4,000 square miles of Wyoming, and 5,000 square miles of Oklahoma.

There are probably comparatively few people now living in Colorado, Wyoming, Kansas and Oklahoma who knew that portions of these States were once embraced in the Republic of Texas. That Texas could have maintained her title to this great domain is believed Proposed Anti-Betting Law Causes Speculation.

TENNESSEE LEGISLATURE SURE TO ENACT STRINGENT BILL.

RACING INTERESTS DECLARE TRACKS WILL BE DESTROYED.

OTHER LEGISLATIVE NEWS.

Nashville, Tenn., Jan. 12.—[Special.]—The enactment of an anti-race-betting bill by the General Assembly, which seems to be a foregone conclusion, will not only destroy the race tracks at Nashville and Memphis, and also materially affect the fair associations in the State where betting has hitherto prevailed on harness races, but it will also be a severe blow to the Kentucky thoroughbred breeding interests.

The breeders and turfmen in Kentucky and Tennessee had hoped that the Tennessee Assembly would go no further than creating a Racing Commission similar to that of Kentucky, and putting all racing matters under its control.

But even this is now seen to be out of the range of possibility. The opposition to racing in this State has grown wonderfully in the last few years, especially in Memphis, and this opposition has been steadily led by a handful of preachers, backed by business men of more or less influence.

The trouble can really all be laid at the door of the Memphis racing interests. Several years ago, Nashville turfmen endeavored to enlist the Memphis Jockey Club people in a demand for the establishment of the State Racing Commission, but it proved futile.

The Memphis managers wanted to have long meetings. They felt that a Racing Commission might limit the meetings to ten or a dozen days each spring and fall, and this would interfere with their determination to have long meetings.

Preachers Grow Active.

The Nashville men abandoned the commission idea then, and Memphis continued. As a result of these long meetings and the Celia-Adler-Tulle meeting at Memphis, summer before last, there were mutterings from the Memphis preachers and business men. These mutterings were taken up by the Rev. W. E. Thompson and other Memphis reformers, with the result that the Rice-Ligon Bill against race betting was introduced in the Tennessee Assembly.

When that law was held unconstitutional, Thompson and his followers recommended that the bill be amended so as to draw that there is not a loophole for the racing men to get through.

Among the biennial reports made to Gov. Cox this week, and which will be transmitted by him to the General Assembly, are those of the State Board of Prison Examiners, the State Railroad Commission and the Adjutant General.

The pension report shows that at the close of November the roll stood as follows: Soldiers—1,411 fourth class, at $10 per year; and 421 fifth class, at $8 per year; total, 1,832. Amount, $23,380. Widows, 208 first class, at $12 per year; and 383 second class, at $8 per year; total, 591. Amount, $10,212. The total expenses of the board for the year were $4,855.95. There are now applications for pensions from 1,150 soldiers and 510 widows.

The Adjutant General's report shows that there are 2,066 fairly-drilled, well-equipped and armed members of the National Guard. It is recommended that the biennial appropriation be increased from $25,000 to $50,000, and that 500 to 1,000 acres of level land on the Cumberland plateau be purchased for permanent camp site and also for rifle ranges. Target ranges at other points are also recommended. During the past two years more officers and men have attended the encampments than ever before.

In the Railroad Commission's report it is shown that of the ninety-six counties in the State, only fourteen are not reached by railroads. During the past year three counties, Overton, Franklin and Union, have been brought into communication with the outside world by means of railroads. Hancock county, in East Tennessee, has neither railroad, telegraph nor telephone communication, according to the commission. East Tennessee sits better off in the way of railroads than either of the other grand divisions.

The commission wants the Legislature to devise some law by which the property of local railroads, operated in this State, can be reached for taxation. These cars now escape taxation. The Pullman Palace Car Company, however, pays a privilege tax. The report also says that the commission has recommended that the tax on the value of the State, and by the exercise of judicial and judicial methods in adjusting controversies between railroads and shippers, it has saved the trouble and expense to them of litigation, and has brought about harmony and co-operation.

Wreck Delays Traffic.

Williamsburg, Ky., Jan. 12.—[Special.]—A freight wreck occurred near Habersham, Tenn., this morning, and all trains have been delayed about six hours. No one was hurt.

Woman's Nature.

Nashville may have a new theater in time to open next season. A local real estate firm has received a proposition to lease a theater for a term of years at a good rental. It will build a new and looking around for a suitable site. There are three theaters here now, but only two of them are in operation.

The old Grand Openhouse, which belongs to the Masons, has been leased jointly by Jake Wells, of the Wallace-Harlan circuit, and W. A. Sheets, manager of the Vendome, the purpose being, so it is alleged, to keep it out of the hands of opposing interests.

The Vendome bookings are controlled by Klau & Brinkner, and they do not want opposition. The new theater, Wells, who owns the Bijou. The latter is a popular-price house. It was built three years ago, and has been one of the most profitable on the circuit.

It is believed the Shuberts and Belasco are behind the new theater project, as under present conditions their attractions are about out of Nashville.

Bill's Effect Feared.

The passage of the Pendleton Bill, extending the provisions of the Adams Law to all towns between 5,000 and 150,000 population, now pending in the Senate, does not necessarily mean that the larger cities will be without saloons. The passage of the bill merely gives the voters in any city not now under the Adams Law the privilege of voting whether or not they will abolish their present saloons and take out charters under the law.

What the liquor and brewing interests fear, however, is that as soon as the bill passes there will arise a contest, especially in Nashville and Knoxville, as to the use of the money voted for the question to the people, and they will be troubled. The result of such a contest, especially in Nashville and Knoxville, is not known. But Clarksville, Columbia and Jackson would very probably suffer by abolishing their present saloons.

If the Pendleton Bill passes, and the appropriations for the year are made, Nashville and one or two other big towns vote out the saloons, Tennessee will be a doubtful State hereafter, because thousands of Democrats voted for Patterson in November merely on the supposition that he was not antagonistic to saloons. These men cannot be held in line again.

ABSINTHE A PERIL

France May Be Ruled By Madmen.

LIQUOR CONSUMPTION REACHES AN APPALLING FIGURE.

GOVERNMENT CONTROL OF INTOXICANTS SUGGESTED.

STATE FACES GRAVE CRISIS.

[Correspondence of the Courier-Journal.] Paris, Jan. 3.—That France may be governed by a horde of madmen if alcoholism and, particularly, the use of absinthe continues at the present rate, is a prospect seriously considered by the Academy of Sciences. Within ten years the consumption of absinthe alone has increased 27 per cent—it is now nearly 215,000 hectoliters per year. As the Chamber of Deputies practically rules France, and as the Deputies are chosen from the great mass of the people, the increasing consumption of liquor is bound to tell.

Speaking of the awful prospect, a learned medical professor who desires to have his name withheld, said to your correspondent: "What will become of public morals, of the dignity of the nation, if alcohol-soaked Deputies attempt to govern France? And the number of alcoholics sitting in the Chamber must necessarily increase, since everybody in France consumes more and more alcohol year after year."

Put Ban On Absinthe.

Your correspondent repeated the above to a member of the French Ministry, who said: "I have no doubt that we will be forced to forbid the sale of absinthe in France, lest the majority of our people become addicted to the poison."

Switzerland and Belgium have taken control of every branch of manufacturing alcoholic liquors, and I think France will have to do the same. The stand taken by the United States Government on the pure whiskey question is a pointer in that direction.

In all the ports, particularly in the war ports of Toulon, Cherbourg, Brest, Havre, etc., the use of opium is becoming very frequent, and the reports made on opium dens almost daily. The majority of these institutions, we are told, are frequented by naval officers, who acquired the habit on their Oriental journeys. In one den a register was found showing that certain frequenters of the place "hit" from 100 to 150 pipes a day.

DUCHESS A GREAT COOK.

Vicky Goes Marketing and Pays Close Attention To Her Kitchen.

[Correspondence of the Courier-Journal.] Coburg, Jan. 3.—Duchess Vicky is easily the best housekeeper among royal dames in Europe. Almost daily she goes marketing with a few ladies and gentlemen of her court, and not unfrequently she carries some tit bit or other home in her own royal hands, while her attendants and servants are always loaded with goodies. The other day she purchased an especially appetizing fresh ham, but the price of twenty-five cents a pound nearly took her breath away.

"Why," cried her royal highness, "how can any honest workman stand such prices without becoming an anarchist? It's an outrage—such prices rob the poor man of his meat. Be assured I will tell hubby about it and will ask him to make the prices reasonable." Turning to her ladies, she said: "I shall cook that ham myself and make it as toothsome as possible for the Duke. Then, after he has had his fill, I will say: 'Don't you think everyone of your subjects ought to eat a ham like that once in a while?'"

BEGGAR-PRIEST DEAD.

Picturesque Figure of Budapest Left Large Estate.

[Correspondence of the Courier-Journal.] Budapest, Jan. 3.—Budapest's "beggar priest" is dead and the capital is minus a most picturesque figure. The old man was a habitue of the boulevards and fashionable restaurants, and a full-fledged Catholic priest and endeavoring to do little services for those passers-by who were in the habit of handing him a contribution once a day. The beggar in Soutane and Siple had a regular round of houses where he used to take his meals. Late at night he went to the general telegraph office, exchanged his copper for silver, smoked a pipe and then laid down near a radiator to sleep until morning. He was offered a home repeatedly by some of his patrons and certainly earned enough by begging to hire a room or go to a lodging house, but he thought himself safer in a public office. "Here they won't rob me," he used to say.

CHURCH CENSUS

Will Be Prepared Under Act of Congress.

PREPARING COMPLETE DIRECTORY OF ALL DENOMINATIONS.

PASTORS AND OFFICERS TO PROVIDE INFORMATION.

CHURCH NEWS OF PAST WEEK.

For the first time since the census of 1890 the United States Government, through the Census Bureau, is about to collect statistics of the churches of the country, authorization having been given by Congress in the act of March 6, 1902. Much preliminary work has been done by the Census Bureau, especially in so planning the scope of the inquiry that the information will fit all religious bodies of the country. There will be no house-to-house canvases, but the information desired will be secured from the pastors and others in charge of the individual churches. The Census Bureau is working through the various denominational centers, having obtained from them complete lists of the officers of churches, parishes, dioceses, associations, conferences and other local bodies, and to these officers the schedules of the census will be sent in bulk, with the request that they be distributed to the local churches in the jurisdiction of each officer. The pastors or other officers of the churches are to fill out the schedules and send them to the Census Bureau.

Fourteen points are to be covered by the Government inquiry. From the churches the following information will be asked:

Name of the denomination.
Division (name of diocese, presbytery, conference, etc.).
Organization (corporate title of individual church).
Location (town or city, county and State).
Year in which established.
Number of church edifice.
Seating capacity.
Value of church property.
Amount of debt on the church, if any.
Value of personnel.
Language in which services are conducted.
Ministers, number and salary.
Communicants, total number, also male and female total.
Sunday-schools; number maintained by church, number of officers and teachers and total number.
It will be noted that this census will determine the number of male and female communicants of the churches. It is the first time such information has ever been sought from all bodies. A few denominations, notably the Congregational, give the information in their annual statistics, but most statements as to the proportion of men and women in the churches are based upon conjecture. It will also be noted that the Census Bureau, in securing information direct from individual churches, will, for the first time since the census of 1890 arrive at totals without basing them upon the official denominational totals. Religious leaders are expressing interest in the matter because they believe that the figures of some of the denominations are unreliable. Rectors and pastors of churches are being urged to be accurate in the information they furnish the Census Bureau, and to base their replies upon actual counts, not upon approximations. The matter is held to be of the utmost importance because it is likely to be fifteen or more years before the United States Government undertakes another religious census.

MILLIONS FOR MISSIONS.

Church of England Largest Contributor—American Methodists Next.

The statistics of the Protestant missionary societies of the world for 1906, as compiled by the Missionary Review, show that there was contributed for the support of foreign missions last year $21,240,147, and that native Christians on the mission fields added $3,535,432 to this amount. Of the larger sum, American Protestants gave $8,980,448, those of Great Britain $8,972,033, and German Protestant societies $3,144,661. Judged by the amount of contribution to the missionary cause, the largest organization in the world is the Church Missionary Society of the Church of England, gave last year $1,910,220. Next to it ranks the Methodist Episcopal Society of this country, which last year raised $1,599,044. Other large organizations are the Presbyterian Foreign Board of this country, which raised $1,145,230; the London Missionary Society (English Congregational), $880,542; the American Board (Congregational), $913,159; the Wesleyan Methodist Society of England, $743,331; the United Free Church Society (English), $720,470; and the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel (Anglican), $730,240.

It is noted that although British and American Protestants contribute almost like sums for foreign missions, the British organizations maintain 8,623 missionaries on the field, while the American missionaries number only 5,708. The British societies also exceed the American in the number of native helpers maintained at mission stations, the figures being respectively 25,495 and 25,493. Notwithstanding these differences in the number of workers, American missionaries last year added 74,594 members to native churches, while the number of additions at British stations was but 36,813. The total number of communicant members at American mission stations is 624,869, and at British 660,550. It is probable that the membership difference between the American and British effort is accounted for by the fact that the British organizations maintain 12,173 schools, with 628,000 scholars, while schools maintained by American missionary societies number 8,932, with 308,870 scholars. The totals for Protestant missionary effort last year show that there were maintained 15,691 missionaries to non-Christian and non-Protestant peoples, and 89,875 native helpers. There are 36,748 mission stations and outstations, and 1,582,000 communicant church members; 148,115 of this number were added last year. Christian adherents among the natives in foreign mission lands are numbered at 4,339,322; 29,010 schools are maintained, and they have 1,257,646 scholars.

BAPTIST GENERAL MEETING.

May Be Held During Coming Exposition At Jamestown.

In response to agitation of the matter by Baptist leaders, especially by leaders in and around Chicago, the officers of the three largest Baptist non-sectarian organizations, the Home Mission Society, the Missionary Union and the Baptist General Convention, are planning the plan of holding a "general meeting" in connection with the missionary anniversary next May, for the consideration of such matters as may not properly come before the missionary societies. This general meeting will be held at the same time and place as the annual convention of the Baptist churches, for all churches are asked to name representatives to sit in the meeting.

Baptists have long felt the need, according to one of their officials, for an organization through which might be expressed the opinion of the whole church on matters of common, but not of missionary, interest. The denomination has no general convention, each church governing itself and being connected with members in the denomination merely by membership in voluntary State or district associations. While it is not designed that the general meeting is to be in any sense a legislative body, it will permit Baptist leaders annually to come together to talk about the large questions of denominational interest. It may go so far as to recommend action to the State or district associations.

A committee has been appointed to prepare a programme for this first general meeting, and it is the belief that there will at that time be organized a general society to which all the churches shall be entitled to send delegates, and that long and full meetings will be provided for. The organization will have to do only with the Baptist churches at the North, and will be to them what the General Baptist Convention is designed to be to the Baptists of North America.

This General Convention, it may be said, is to have a meeting in May of this year in the convention hall of the Jamestown Exposition. The convention was organized two years ago, and was to have had a meeting last spring. For some reason the meeting was omitted, and there was some talk to the effect that the whole plan had fallen through. A committee has now designated the time and place of meeting, and there the Baptists of the South, the North and Canada will gather. The programme has not yet been prepared.

W. Bailey, of Philadelphia, is looking after the American arrangements. Sessions of the convention are to be held in a large hall in Rome, but what promises to be the most unique gathering in the history of the world, to be held within the ruins of the Colosseum, where, in the early days of the Christian faith, many martyrs perished. It is stated officially that in holding the Sunday-school convention in Rome there is no purpose in any way to antagonize the Roman Catholic Church.

Quakers Make Unusual Gain.

Quakers in America, according to statistics just compiled, number 95,003, and, adding the 2,810 who are in foreign mission fields, there were at the close of 1906 a total of 97,813 connected with American Friends' yearly meetings. Western comes next, with 15,229 members, and then follow Iowa, with 12,414; Kansas, with 11,114; Wilmington, with 10,205; North Carolina, with 6,469; Ohio, with 6,013; New England, with 4,421; Philadelphia, with 4,389; California, with 3,477; New York, with 3,415; Oregon, with 1,944; Baltimore, with 1,200, and Canada, with 1,036.

National Bible Institute.

To promote systematic study and instruction in the Bible, the National Bible Institute, with Mr. Don O. Shelton, an officer of the Congregational Home Missionary Society, will work in cooperation with the local churches and pastors. Mr. H. Willis Reed is secretary and George A. Sanford treasurer of the institute, which has headquarters in New York.

Seventy-fifth Anniversary.

The cent of 1907, in foreign missionary interest, will be the celebration of the centennial anniversary of the beginning of Protestant missions in China. The celebration is to be held in Shanghai from April 25 to May 6, and already a number of officials of missionary organizations are on their way to attend and take part in it.

Moravians To Celebrate.

Moravians to celebrate the completion, on March 1 of this year, the 150th anniversary of the organized activity of their church, which they claim to be the oldest church organization of Protestants in the world in existence as first organized, and the only Protestant church which is an organized unit all over the world.

The Moravians are not a large body, and number but 27,924 members in the home churches of Europe and America, but they have always been noted for their missionary activity, and they have 33,133 communicants among the

EXCELLENT SPORT

PROMISED AT PHOENIX RINK FOR THIS AFTERNOON.

Undeclared Stars Will Meet Crack Delmar's of Jeffersonville In Roller Polo.

Excellent sport is promised this afternoon at the Phoenix rink when the undeclared Phoenix Stars meet the crack Delmar's of Jeffersonville for a return game of roller polo. These teams met last Sunday afternoon at the Phoenix rink and the Hill team was victorious by a score of two goals. The Indians boys are after the Delmar's, who are confident of being able to break the Phoenix team's long winning streak, while the Phoenix boys are just as confident of adding another victory to their credit.

Polo at the Phoenix rink continues to draw large crowds at both the amateur and professional games, and the race for positions in the amateur league is now coming interesting. The Union Coal Co. is now leading the league, with the Highland team in second position. The Phoenix professional team, which plays at Belknap, has not and defeated all of the teams about Louisville and are now looking a series of games with professional teams from all parts of the country.

An announcement which will be a welcome one to Louisville skaters is the booking by the Phoenix of Fielding, Western champion, who last week defeated Belknap, the local man, together with several other stars in both speed and fancy skating. Fielding is now racing at Cincinnati in the all-American speed championship, and will come directly to Louisville to meet several other stars from the Cincinnati tournament. These races will probably be held next week, but the days have not yet been decided on.

The game this afternoon will be called at 3 o'clock, and the regular skating session extended until 8:30 o'clock. The line up will be as follows:

Phoenix. Postions. Delmar's.
Miller.....First Rush.....Johnson
Burgart.....Second Rush.....Wendel
Wallace.....Center.....J. Worral

TRADE MARKS

Bought From All Louisville Manufacturers.

EXHIBIT WILL CIRCLE WALL OF HUGE ARMORY BUILDING.

SAMUEL CASTLEMAN, JR., HEADS HIS DEPARTMENT.

MUCH WORK UNDERTAKEN.

Samuel Castleman, Jr., assisted by more than twenty exposition workers, is endeavoring to gather together a complete collection of the trade-marks and labels used by Louisville manufacturers for exhibit in the exposition building. The work is a particularly comprehensive one. While the maximum number of manufacturers who are to be solicited, or have been solicited by other exposition workers, does not exceed a dozen each, the members of Mr. Castleman's department will have to see about 200 manufacturers each. The plan, as it is now arranged for these exhibits will make the Trade-mark and Label Department one of the most attractive ever seen in any exposition building. It is the intention of Department P—Everything in Trade-marks to frame the trade-marks of each manufacturer exhibiting, in a separate frame about 20x22 inches, the trade-marks to be mounted upon a handsome mat, and to be surrounded by such labels as the manufacturer may elect to display.

It has been said by prominent men who are considered well informed as to Louisville's manufacturing importance, that such an exhibit, even though it embraces each separate trade-mark and label used by all the manufacturers of Louisville would not occupy a space much larger than the walls of an ordinary-sized living room.

Accurate measurements show that the walls of the exposition building in the balcony, where the trade-marks and labels will be displayed, will be covered by a complete circle a little more than four feet wide. No more gallant showing, on paper, of Louisville's manufacturing interests could be made than through the medium of these trade-marks and labels.

The frame selected by Department P is simple in the extreme, though artistic.

THE RISE OF F. J. HASKIN

Fatherless Newsboy In a Provincial Town.

Worked His Way Up Through Many Privations.

Holds Envious Place In the Field of Journalism

TRUE STORY OF HIS CAREER.

Since the Courier-Journal has engaged Frederic J. Haskin to write an important series of articles, its readers will be interested to read something about the history and personality of the young man who has been given this great assignment.

Haskin is going to tell about the bigness of the United States; the length and breadth and depth of this country of ours; the enormous proportions of its institutions, and the wonderful opportunities it offers to all who want a fighting chance to make their way in the world.

FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

He ought to do this well, because he is himself a notable example of what pluck and hustle can accomplish in free America. This young man who has made such a pronounced success of his chosen line of work belongs to the class that Americans love to honor—self-made men. Haskin is a Missourian. His father died when he was nine years of age. His mother was frail physically, and he was not robust in his youth. Together the mother and little son took up the severe battle of life where the overworked father had laid it down.

Begins Life As Newsboy.

The story of Fred Haskin's fight for recognition is a good thing to tell. It is a record of grit and persistence ending like it always ends—when a boy plays the game as clean and hard as he did—in success. And back of it all is the fine hand and brave heart of the Spartan mother. The Haskins lived in a house that was just a little bigger than a box car. It had two rooms, and the rent was $2 a month. To make both ends meet, the mother baked bread for several families and took in sewing. Before he was ten years old Frederic Haskin made his first connection with the papers—he began selling them on the street.

At this time his mother, with true Spartan spirit, kept the boy spurred to his best endeavor. She never let him flinch or falter. When he would come home to her in the evening, hungry and footsore, perhaps with three or four papers still unsold, she would question him as to whom he had sold and whom he had missed on his rounds, then send him back to make a clean sweep of his task. It was this discipline and fond, watchful partnership of his invalid mother that stiffened the backbone of the youth, and instilled into his spirit that iron necessary to insure victory to a man in the strife of life.

Before he was tall enough to reach the cases, the newsboy began to set type in the local printing office. He used to stand on an empty box while he inked the Washington hand press. He folded papers, and helped to get out the mail. Then, having acquired a practical knowledge of the mechanical side of the business, he began to write. In the course of time he became editor and proprietor of the little local paper where he began as a printer's devil, and afterward made it one of the best papers in the State.

Decides To Branch Out.

Eventually the ambitious young Missourian decided to enter a larger field, to become a contributor to the metropolitan press. At first he met with heart-breaking discouragement. On his first bid his remuneration would be so small that he would have to sleep in chair cars and eat at lunch counters. For years he could not sell enough copy to keep himself afloat, and pay his mother's bills at home. Time and again he had to raise money by other means.

At such times he would work up various kinds of advertising schemes, wherever he happened to be when his funds gave out, but as soon as his finances began to mend he would be back among the editors again, talking hopefully and soliciting their assignments. Although turned down again and again he always came back smiling and determined. He would not be denied. The upshot of it all was that

Haskin eventually began to get the assignments, and when he was sent after the facts about something he always came back with his story.

In the last eight or nine years he has been all over the world. He has taken all the chances that soldiers of fortune must take. He has tramped with the miners of the Klondike, has been through revolutions in Central America, has crossed the Andes on mule-back, has been in riots in Russia, has seen the horrors of all sorts of epidemics and has been exposed to all kinds of dangers. He has been in all the European countries as well as India, China, Japan, the Philippines, Cuba, Canada, in fact, anywhere and everywhere where things have been happening that people wanted to hear about.

A Diplomatist's Story.

A prominent diplomatist in Washington tells an interesting story of the intangible will and perseverance of Mr. Haskin. During a sensational currency struggle in 1920, a few years ago, the young Mr. Haskin was sent down there hastily by a number of editors to get at the ins and outs of the monetary situation. He determined to see President Diaz and talk the matter over with him, and accordingly went to the American Ambassador and presented his credentials with the request that the Ambassador make the arrangements for the interview. "Nothing doing," said the dignitary, although the language he used was more diplomatic than that. "It is absolutely impossible for you to secure an audience with the President, and I advise you to give it up and seek another way of getting your information." Haskin said he would not give it up; that he was going to get there or know the reason why.

This was about 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and that evening a magnificent ball was given under the auspices of some of the leading members of the American colony. President Diaz was to be the guest of honor. Approaching his host, the Ambassador from the United States, President Diaz said apologetically: "I beg you to excuse me, but I was so absorbed in an interview with a most interesting young newspaper man from your country, a Mr. Haskin, that I did not realize it was so late." Needless to say, the Ambassador had an improved opinion of Haskin after that.

He Interviews the Pope.

A more recent instance of a similar nature occurred when Haskin was sent to Rome to secure an interview with the Pope. For the reason that our diplomatic representatives are accredited to the Vatican, the newspaper man who is sent to Rome has to depend on his own resources to accomplish his ends. While it is not a difficult matter to see His Holiness, by joining one of the groups of pilgrims that are frequently admitted to his presence, to gain a private audience with him, and induce him to make a statement for publication, is much more difficult, and few, indeed, are the correspondents who have even attempted it. Day after day went by, and the editors heard nothing from their correspondent. They waited patiently because they knew the man. Finally when the press dispatches stated that Haskin had been received in private audience by His Holiness, they were not in the least surprised. The young Missourian had formed the habit of making good.

While our erstwhile newspaper boy, by his wit and grit and resourcefulness, has patiently worked himself upward to a high and profitable position in his profession, he is not in the least spoiled by his success. His scrap book contains a surprising mass of correspondence with diplomatists and dignitaries in all parts of the world. One page shows the exchange of letters relative to his presentation to the Prince of Wales, another has the translation of his invitation to a garden party given by the Emperor of Japan. Again the correspondence shows that he has been the honored guest of a princely Maharajah in far-away India. But in his conversation Haskin never refers to these things. He is not a social climber and looks upon all such matters as a part of his day's work.

Painstaking Worker.

This is the manner of man who is to write the Courier-Journal's series about America. That he will do it well there is no doubt. He is extremely painstaking in gathering his material, and has an easy, direct and fluent style. His viewpoint is always broad and sane. He believes in the American republic and its people. While he does not hesitate to expose or condemn abuses wherever they are found in our life, he is not one of those who, having found something wrong, infer that there is nothing right, and that the whole nation is in the wrong. Every American will find genuine pleasure and profit in reading his letters.

LOUIS BROWNLOW.

THE ABUSE OF THE INDOORS.

[Edith Carman in the Craftsman.] Houses were made for shelter, not for confinement; for freedom, not restraint. They were intended to enlarge our sphere of activities, not to diminish them.

After food, they are the first requisite of the first trace of civilization which man imposes upon the natural world, and the most primitive and lasting evidence of the handwork which grows into all the arts of all the centuries.

They foster the family and make progress possible, but we should not abuse their protection. We have craved away into their still and comfortable recesses, slept in their dry, dense chambers, and shut ourselves over their sheltered fires, read by their unrelenting lights, and eaten from their boards, and have become so that we are grown pale, timid, peevish and thankless.

We have kept ourselves away from the wind and the sun and the lashing rain, from the feel of the earth under foot and the noise of the waves and stars overhead until we no longer know the world and simple joys of being alive. We have set up barriers against the inclemency of nature and covered before her severe austerity until now we have forgotten how indispensable is all her kindly nurture, how tonic her rugged ways, how all of nature's her assurance calm. Houses were only made to live in when it is too cold or too hot or too wet to live out of doors. Any other form of life is best. To sleep out of doors for a month is better than a trip to Europe.

Chenault-Speed.

Miss Florence Dillingham Chenault, of Richmond, and Mr. George Keats Speed, of New York, to be married in March.

MR. AND MRS. CHENAU-TO, of Richmond, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Florence Dillingham Chenault, to George Keats Speed, of New York. Miss Chenault is one of the best known belles of Central Kentucky, and a frequent visitor to Louisville. She is exceptionally pretty and charming, with a host of friends. In Speed formerly lived in Louisville, but for the past few years has been his home in New York, where now holds the position of city editor of the New York Evening Journal. The wedding of Miss Chenault and Speed will take place in Richmond in the time in March.

Engagement.

Miss Minnie Lee Harris and Mr. Wm. B. Blake, of Pittsburg, to be married at home February 5.

MR. AND MRS. ALBERT MEAD announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Minnie Lee Harris, to Mr. Wm. B. Blake, of Pittsburg, Pa. The wedding will be solemnized February 5 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Mead, 312 West Lee street.

Informal Dinner

To Be Given This Evening by Mrs. Richard Van Vredenburg at His Home.

MR. RICHARD VAN VREDENBURG will be the host at an informal dinner to be given this evening at his home in New Albany.

Decorations will be in parti-colored and Mr. Van Vredenburg's guests include:

MISSES: Elsie Rankin, Cornelia Anderson, Lucille Hite, Howard Lee, Richard Look, and Miss Gault.

MESDAMES: Mrs. John Starks, George Robinson, John Young, Haywood Clifton, William O'Brien, William T. Durrett, Charles F. Barton.

February 5

The Date Set for the second Cotillon to be given by the Patriarchs at the Galt House.

The second of the Patriarchs' cotillions will be given on the evening of Tuesday, February 5, at the Galt House. The cotillon will be led by Mr. Garret Thomas and Miss Anita Ghens. It will begin promptly at 8:30 o'clock. The Patriarchs' cotillions are probably the leading social events of the season, and are among the handsomest entertainments given in Louisville.

Skating Club.

Composed Principally of Married People, to Meet Every Friday Afternoon at the Coliseum.

A SKATING club has been formed to meet every Friday afternoon from 5 to 7 o'clock at the Coliseum.

After twenty married couples composed the club, and the members have the privilege of inviting friends, but it is the intention of the members of the club not to have over a hundred people at a time at their meetings. The musicians are engaged to play for the skaters, and no instructors are present to coach the beginners.

The members of the club are:

Buffet Luncheon

To be Given by Mrs. and Mr. John Marshall on Tuesday in Honor of Miss Mary Courtney and Mr. Morris Stratton.

A water-color sketch of the ruins of the old church at Jamestown is one of the interesting bits of ornament in the room.

A framed letter written by James Madison to John Lee in 1788, and presented to the society by Mrs. William Barrett, of Frankfort, regent of the Mc Vernon Society.

The whole impression given on entering the room is one of charming harmony, restfulness and dignity.

Bridge Players

Meet Every Monday Afternoon—Well-known Women—The Are Excellent Players.

A NUMBER of well-known women who are excellent bridge players have organized a club, which meets every Monday afternoon at the homes of the members.

The members of the club are nearly all of them former members of the Young Married Women's Euchre Club, which existed for a number of years.

Whenever a member of the club is unable to attend a meeting, some guest is invited to substitute for her. The club is composed of the following women:

MESDAMES: Mrs. John Starks, George Robinson, John Young, Haywood Clifton, William O'Brien, William T. Durrett, Charles F. Barton.

Euchre Club

Entertained Friday Evening by Mr. and Mrs. William O. Bonnie.

The Friday Night Euchre Club, which has been recently formed, had its first meeting at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. William O. Bonnie on Friday evening.

Four prizes were given, and they were unusually pretty. Mrs. Arthur Robinson won the first prize for the women, a handsome comb mounted in gold.

The first prize for the men, a leather jewel box, was won by Mr. John L. Dunlap. Mr. W. Q. Bonnie, Jr., won the second prize, a leather wallet.

The members of the club are:

deep buff paper, with a colonial pattern of white over it. The hangings at the windows are of a soft-toned blue, carrying out the colors of the society—blue and gold. The mahogany table in the center of the room, in colonial design, has a mat of blue velvet, bound in gold galleon. A corner cabinet and a writing desk of mahogany, both in colonial design, are well placed in the room.

There are several interesting pictures on the wall—an engraving of "Lady Washington's Reception" occupying the place of honor on the east wall. An excellent engraving of Gilbert Stuart's Washington hangs over the writing desk. A large photograph of Mr. Vernon, tastefully framed, hangs on the south wall. The photograph was presented to the Louisville branch of the society of Colonial Dames by Mrs. William Barrett, of Frankfort, regent of the Mc Vernon Society.

A framed letter written by James Madison to John Lee in 1788, and presented to the society by Mrs. William Barrett, the great-granddaughter of John Lee, hangs near the corner cabinet. An antique spinning wheel, which is the property of Mrs. William Culbertson, and which has been loaned by her to the society, forms one of the ornamental and interesting features of the room.

The whole impression given on entering the room is one of charming harmony, restfulness and dignity.

As a fact the "American scene" may be said to have begun in London when we have Julia Neilson and Fred Terry back again in Paul Keating's "Bartholomew Fair" and when the "Elihu" has scored undoubtedly in "The Vicar of Wakefield" at the Prince of Wales, and "Clyde" Fiske in "The Merchant of Venice," where his adapted version of "Tripplepeake" has just passed its 125th night. Of course, however, the "American scene" will not be complete until the visit of E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe to the Waldorf Theater. This is sure to be a triumph, and will no doubt even comments the edifice may make and in the meantime, besides the production of the new Morton play, "The American," by Lena Ashmead, we will back her in American purchases "Clothes," and, later on, to see her in "The Transatlantic" piece, "Cooling of Eve."

Add that Charles Frohman promises at least two productions of plays from America, and you will see what a wholesale opportunity there will be for "slating" of the part of English reviewers. The fact that the American production has the same effect on these Judges as that of a red rag on a bull. With a memory, however, which is not to be despised, we have showered on "Arizona," of the "hang-up" notices that "Leah Kleeschna" received, and the same kind of suggestions that were extended to "The Dictator" and practically every other transatlantic play that has come up to the London standard. It is difficult, as I said at first, to convince one's self that any of these criticisms are really directed either on the part of the English critics or English playgoers.

After escaping from the prison he made his way to the house of a friend who concealed him in the huts and barns of the neighborhood. Meanwhile the faithful Fosco who agreed to take over the farm and keep secret his whereabouts, was waiting for him. Pace was still in hiding with his friends, Fosco, carrying out his directions, constructed in the attic a cell for the fugitive. One day, one night, after all search for him had been abandoned, Pace returned to his cell and found that the door of the cell that had been prepared for him.

From that moment, until discovered by the carabinieri, he declares that he was in the cell. Fosco always bears him out. He held no communication with anybody except Fosco and that only through the trap door. His only bedding was a pallet of straw. He issued strict orders to Fosco that the only food served him should be bread and water. He refused to be rigidly adhered, despite the protests of his old servant that he was treating himself too harshly. He was never treated in any jail in Europe. "I have my own conscience to satisfy, as well as the law," was Pace's invariable answer to these pleadings.

"I think he's rather nice," said Laura.

"I don't like him," said Miss O'Neill this morning and I hated to see it."

"Well," said Carter, judiciously, "I hate him, too. I hate him, too. But I'll admit if you like, that I was kidding him. You see, Miss Head here has given most strict orders that I should not let the Okie-women ever to be admitted into the fort together to

'That, what a marvel you are to know things! I use the word? Well, we had a Portuguese linguistler down at Malla-Nuala's place. He said he'd brought a chimbeque imported that and a lot more Comolito words as part of his baggage, and we were to have a little party. He gave me a little. Say, Trouble, come in here, and keep away from that sugar bowl in case you have a temper. I'll be back in a minute. Now, tell me, You fit for saving what a chimbeque is?"

"The Kroon," said Laura, "perceptibly lifted her eyebrows in contempt. 'Den bushman!

A BIRD'S-EYE VIEW
OF THE COUNTRY COVETED BY MANY NATIONS

BERBERS FROM THE COUNTRY.

A LAND OF 10,000 STRAW VILLAGES

MR CARPENTER & HIS MOHAMMEDAN DRAGOMAN

THE JEWS DO THE BUSINESS

ITS ENORMOUS extent and wonderful resources—A country going to waste—Ten million white Africans and how they live—The Berbers and Moors—How the Jews do the business—Something about the cities and the ten thousand straw villages—A warning to flirtatious travelers; or, the story of the Spaniard who died for love.

By FRANK G. CARPENTER.

TANGIER, Morocco—Stand with me at this, the chief gate of Morocco, and take a bird's-eye view of the country. We are on the Atlantic coast, at the northwestern corner of the African continent and only fifteen miles from Europe. The strait of Gibraltar begins just east of here, and the Pillars of Hercules are almost in view. I can see the hills of Spain over the way, and I know that the seat of the world's civilization is not far beyond.

This country is on the very edge of Europe. It is fat with natural resources, and the great Powers would like to gobble it up. France, Germany and England covet it, and it is only the jealousy of each which keeps off the others. On my way here I called at Algiers, Spain, where the conference of the Powers was held, and I find in Tangier the representatives of all the nations which formed a part of it. Our own American Minister is now at Fez to officially welcome Morocco into our family of nations. He went there with a large caravan, guarded by soldiers sent by the Sultan, the Moroccan Government paying all bills.

But what kind of a creature is this, our new international sister? In the first place, she is coy. She would rather be let alone, and her bosom is raging over her international adoption. Nevertheless, the Powers want her and her trade, for she is rich and her country is one of the best parts of this continent. It extends from this point down the Atlantic coast for a distance as great as from New York to Pittsburgh, and eastward for several hundred miles along the Mediterranean from Gibraltar to Algeria. It is bigger than any country in Europe, excepting Russia, and bigger than all New England, added to the combined area of New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia.

Morocco is a part of what was once called "Little Africa," the great section at the northwestern end of that continent which embraces Morocco, Algeria and Tunisia, reaching from east to west as far as from New York to Omaha, and everywhere wider than from Philadelphia to Boston. This land was named by the Arabs of the past the Western Island. It is bounded on two sides by the waters of the Atlantic and Mediterranean, and on the others by that sea of sand, the Desert of Sahara. Of this Algeria and Tunisia belong to the French and are rapidly changing

Among the White Africans.

You can know nothing, however, about the situation until you consider the people. These Moors are not like our negroes, whose ancestors came from below here across the Sahara in the lands bordering the Gulf of Guinea. These people are black as your boots, and as barbarous as any tribes on the face of the earth. They are low in intelligence and are terribly debased. These have brains which will compare with our own. They are Mohammedans who believe in Allah and the prophet. They are white and they wear clothes. Some of them are as well dressed as any Christian gentleman, and their clothes cost more than ours. They have gowns of the finest wool, undergarments of beautiful cloth, sashes of silk, and shoes of fine yellow leather. Their hands are soft and their faces often handsome. There are many red-haired and red-bearded men among them. Their features sparkle with intelligence and they have most of the characteristics of the Caucasian race. About the only black Africans here are those who have been brought across the desert from the Sudan to be sold as slaves. There are, however, many mulattoes, the offspring of these negroes and the Moors. The population of Morocco all told is about ten millions. A census has never been taken, and by some the number is estimated much higher. The majority of the people are Berbers or Kabyles, and after them come the Arabs and Jews.

The Berbers are one of the most independent races on earth. Some people suppose them to have emigrated from Southern Europe ages ago. It is known that they were here in the days of the Phoenicians, and they fought again and again with the Carthaginians and Romans. They have been frequently conquered in battle, but it is claimed that they have never been really subdued. They are somewhat like the Swiss in that they have villages in the mountains, and it would be almost impossible to reach them in time of war. Most of the mountain tribes today are of this old Berber race, and the same is true of the Tuaregs or the Sahara brigands.

These Berber people have a language of their own, and they once had their own religion. To-day they are about all Mohammedans and they resent the foreign invasion. They do not like to pay taxes, and not long ago when one of the Sultan's officials demanded the tenth of the crop of a certain tribe, the chief replied:

"If the Sultan wants taxes let him come himself for them. We will mold them into silver bullets and deposit them in the cities, and he will have to get them out of there."

As to the Arabs, these came in with the Mohammedan invasion, many centuries ago, and they have mixed more or less with the Berbers. There are three or four millions of them. Some are nomadic Bedouins, living in the oases of the Sahara or on the edge of that desert and a large number are farmers on the rich plains of Morocco.

Arabs are also found in the cities. The Jews number something like two hundred thousand. They live in all cities, and here and there in the villages. They are the real business men of the country, doing most of the banking, and having the chief wholesale edge as possible, and by working on anything I undertake as hard as possible.

"Does he play poker?" the youth asked.

"No," he smiled confidently at that, and took her hand in his.

"Then," he said, "I'll teach him. Put your trust in me, love, and fear for the future not at all."

"What are the wild waves saying?" "The male philosopher answered in a hoarse, gruff voice:

"Nothing, Matilda. They are like some people we know. They make a lot of noise, but they don't say anything."

LEUT. BEVAN, of the "Drake," was talking at the New York Horse Show about rough weather.

Someone told the old story about the winter day when it was so windy that the crowds all had to walk home.

Leut. Bevan laughed at this story, saying he could see the black crows trailing along the road against the wind. Then he went on:

"But that wind could have been talking to one that my boatwain talks about."

"This wind," the boatwain declares, "came on in the Bay of Biscay, and it blew so hard that it took four men to hold the captain's hat on, and even then it blew all the anchors off the buttons of his coat."

JOHN S. MAGUIRE, the Dayton meat dealer who has for years been fighting the beef trust, was talking in his office one day about the trust's methods.

"For unblushing and unashamed misconduct," he said, "this trust reminds me of a poor young man who had proposed to a millionaire's daughter."

"The girl liked the fellow, but his poverty frightened her."

"Think of the future, dear," she said. "You are poor. You can give me none of the luxuries to which I have been accustomed from my childhood."

"But your father—" and retail shops. Many of the chiefs of the large tribes have Jews to finance them and they also lend money to the Moorish officials. The most of these Jews came originally from Spain, and some belong to families which have lived a hundred of years in Morocco. As a class they are despised by the Moors and in the cities are compelled to live in their own quarters. In most places it is against the law for them to live anywhere else and they are not allowed to buy lands.

The Jews dress in their own costume, wearing caps with little curls hanging down each side the face and long black coats or gowns. They are sometimes stoned by the Moorish boys and are forced to do certain menial work. In Europe the Jewish quarter is known as the Ghetto. Here it is called the Melah, which I am told means sad, and may come from one special job which the Jews have, and that is the picking of the heads of rebels before they are fastened up over the gates of the cities as a warning to traitors.

Every Moroccan city has three parts, one belonging to the Mohammedans, where the officials live; another containing the stores and homes of the Moors, and the third the quarters of these despised Jews. There are but few large towns in the country, but a few are of about the same character, being made up of box-like, flat-roofed buildings and surrounded by walls. The most important city is Fez, which lies 170 miles south of here. It contains 140,000 people and is the chief capital. Another capital is Marrakech, which contains 60,000, and a third is Meknes, which is of about the same size. The Sultan lives in all of these places during the year. He is now at Fez and will probably be there for some months. He carries his court with him, but leaves a relative in charge of a capital while he leaves it. I understand that he also has a palace in each of the ports. I have seen the one at Tangier. It is shabby.

The Ports of Morocco.

The chief ports of Morocco are eight in number. They run along the Atlantic and Mediterranean coasts. This town of Tangier is about the largest. It has fifty or sixty thousand people. Tetuan, farther eastward on the Mediterranean, covers more space, but it has a smaller population. Along the Atlantic farther south are Larache, Rabat, Casa Blanca, Mazagan, Safi and Agadir. All of these are white towns surrounded by walls and made of box-shaped white houses of brick and stucco.

Mogador has about 25,000 population, and of these 10,000 are Jews. The Jews have been making a great deal of money there and some of them have been gradually moving out of the Melah and renting houses in the Moorish section of the town. This, I am told, was the cause of the rebellion which broke out in that quarter a few months ago.

The chief of one of the Mohammedan tribes near by was called in against them, who are yet holed on, and no doubt justly, with suspicion.

"It was thought of Scarborough that, for a poor man, he was yet holed on, and one day the blow fell. He was arrested for chicken-stealing."

"Did you ever know this man to steal poultry?" said the lawyer for the defense.

"No, I never did," said the witness. "But this is what I do know: If I was a chicken, and I saw Scarborough was about, I'd most high."

THURSDAY, not Saturday, is the day the school children should have off, said a member of a board of education. "Then the week of work would be broken up twice, instead of only once, as now."

"In France, last year, I noticed all the children going to school on Saturday."

"Why, how is this?" I said. "I thought Saturday was a school holiday all the world over."

"No," they said. "Sunday is a holiday with us, and Thursday is a holiday two days off. These are the best days off for they break the week twice."

"We have Saturday and Sunday off in America," said I.

"Why, how foolish!" said the French. "Two holidays right together, and then an unbroken stretch of hard work for five days. School is hard work, you know. The average school child works harder than the average man."

"I came home convinced that we ought to make Saturday a school day and Thursday a day off. I have been urging this change for a year now. But the people balk at it. It is like urging a change of religion."

SHORT STORIES OF INTEREST.

SENATOR DRYDEN, of New York, said of a certain article on life insurance in a review:

"It is like the wild waves."

"Like the wild waves?" "Yes, precisely. Two philosophers, a male and a female, were walking on a deserted beach. The female philosopher murmured dreamily:

A PAGE FOR BOYS

OUR OWN CORNER

THIS department is being conducted for all kinds of contributions from children. Original poems, fables, compositions, smart sayings of children, original drawings, puzzles, etc.—in fact, anything interesting that the readers of this page will send in will be published.

Contributions from the children are asked, and should be addressed to "Our Own Corner," Children's Page, Courier-Journal.

Write on one side of the paper only.

New headings for this department are desired, and the best and most original ones sent in will be used as the top of this department. Do not make them too large.

The heading for this week was drawn by Katherine Leathers, age eleven years, of 1466 Second street.

The editor wishes to caution the contributors to this department not to send any but original work, either in compositions, puzzles, drawings, poems or anything else.

Remember that you have no right to sign your name to anything in this matter, so be very careful in this matter.

Be sure to mark your contributions each time with the word "original."

In sending in contributions to the Children's Page, always write on one side of the paper only, and sign your name and address legibly at the bottom of the contribution.

Three Made Happy.

In a low-built cabin, protected from winter's weather by two hills, sat a little girl and her mother, both poorly clad, hovering over a fire of chips.

The mother was dreaming of the past, while her little girl, with head buried in her hands, was thinking of why she could not enjoy Christmas as other little girls do.

"Mother," said she, raising her head from her hands, "what is Christmas, and why does not St. Nicholas visit me?"

With tears in her eyes the mother answered: "Christmas, my child, is a holiday held in memory of the birth of Christ."

"Now my other question, mother?" "My dear child, St. Nicholas cannot come to see you, for our means are not sufficient to afford a comfortable everyday living."

"Mother," but the question was interrupted by a knock at the door.

Quickly the little girl, with a sudden light of joy in her eyes, ran to the door and opened it, said with weak but kind voice: "Come in, Mabel" (for that was the caller's name).

Mabel entered with a bright smile on her pretty face, spoke to Mrs. Saunders and was seated.

She began: "Mary, I have come to make you a present of a few dollars. This morning my father gave me $4 to spend in any way I wished. I knew you were my friend, and thought of how you would enjoy a small sum to spend. After my father left I put on my wraps and started for your home. Now, Mary, here is the money. Take it and make yourself happy."

"But, Mabel, you would not have any money then?"

"Never mind about me. I can do without money this Christmas, and, besides, father will give me more. Now, Mary, spend it in any way that you wish, and I will be back in the morning to see what you have bought."

Mabel went home, with a happy thought of the kind and heartfelt deed she had done.

She had rendered three hearts happy—Mary, her mother and herself.

Reaching home at almost dark she found her father awaiting her. As she entered with a look of joy upon her face, her father asked: "Mabel, my girl, what has kept you out so late?"

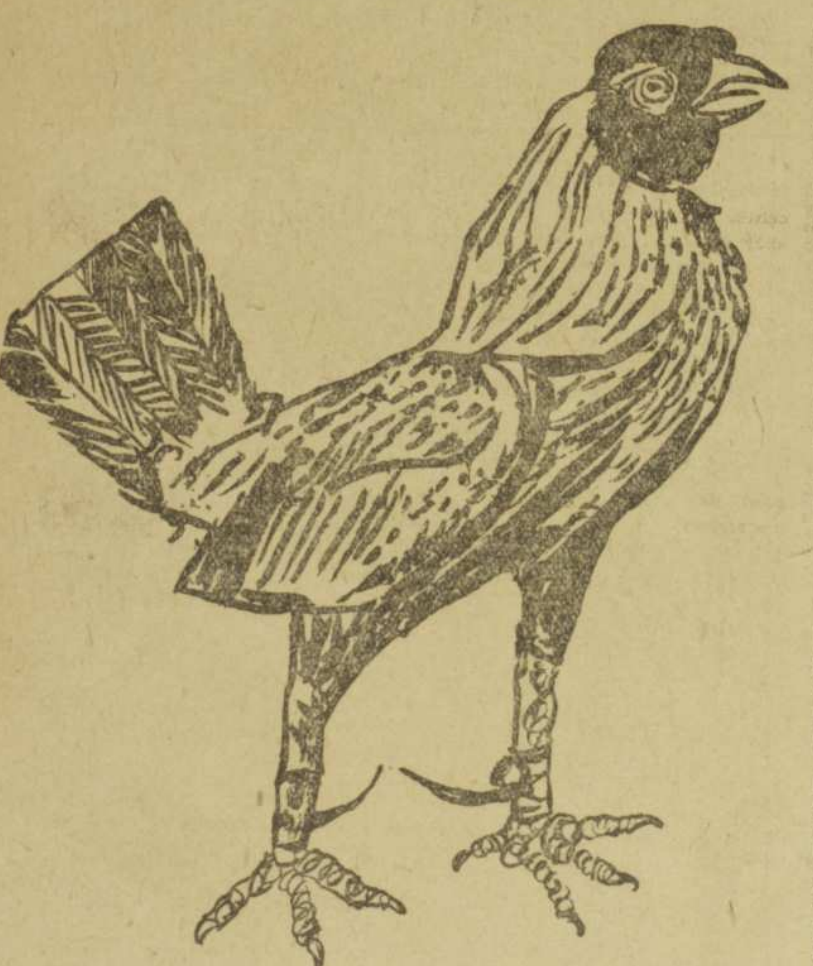

"Father, I have been down to Mrs. Saunders."

"And what, but where are the things you bought with your money?" he asked.

"I have given my money away," she replied.

Prize Winners.

The correct answer to the New Year puzzle published two weeks ago is, "Winning the bells."

The first prize of $1 is awarded to Margaret Mitchell Bates, 504 West St. Catherine street.

The second prize, a book, is given to Beattie M. Hensel, 322 West Riverside, Jeffersonville, Ind.

The third prize, a book, goes to Pauline Eldin, 527 West Chestnut street.

Notice—Prize winners living in Louisville will please call at the Courier-Journal editorial rooms on Tuesday afternoon for their prizes. Please call promptly between the hours of 3 and 5, else the prizes will be forfeited.

Things Worth Knowing.

The Falcons of St. Paul's.

Birds have nested in St. Paul's Cathedral almost from the time it was built till the present day. A pair of peregrine falcons have frequented it for several years, the tenants often attracting the attention of the wayfarers down below. One of them was seen to strike the spire, the falcon sailing round and round in circles over the houses before making its fatal dive, gazed upwards, open-mouthed and helpless.

The Toad's Jewel.

Old writers, including even Shakespeare, held strange notions about the toad. Though foul, ugly and venomous, the creature "wears yet a precious jewel in his head." But the toad's stone the more poisonous the flesh. The stone was called boric or ston, and when set in a finger ring was a nice protection of the wearer against the effects of poison. The toad is still with us, but what has become of the jewel?

Keepers of Pots and Pans.

In former days an army in the field had to carry pots and pans and other cooking utensils. They were looked after by the rifflers of the camp-followers—lazy lads and men too idle and ignorant to stick to any trade. Owing to their dirty appearance they were styled mockers and were looked upon as being also lawless and vicious, in course of time.

The Dancing Chanoiller.

Headstrong Queen Bees, in 1557, chose as her Lord High Chancellor Sir Christopher Hatton, a courtier who had to dance to the order of the queen of his time. It was cruel of her majesty to anticipate Mr. W. S. Gilbert by having a dancing queen, but she seems to have waited at last of her huffy and aristocratic and he took her neglect so much to heart that he died in 1591 in his fifty-fourth year. His head was buried in the Tower of London, and his body was buried in the same place. When the dancing queen placed his robes on the floor with the remark, "Lie there, Christopher, till I come," he was buried in the same place. He entertained the Queen several times at his house at Stoke Newington, where his grave is still to be seen. The toad and the Seal and Mince danced before him.—[Caswell's "Little Folks."

Hot Cherries.

The fruit dealer had trouble to keep people from taking liberties with his stock. At last he put a basketful of Cayenne peppers in a tempting position near the door and ticketed them "Pina Colada Cherries."

The tailor next door was the first victim. He snatched up; inquired how was was and about midday he took one of the cherries into his mouth. He was game, but left in a hurry to attend to a customer.

The minister, on a parochial call, paused to observe pleasantly that he hadn't tasted Pina Colada cherries since he was a missionary down South. He took one. He agreed that they were as superb as ever as he wiped his weeping eyes on his coat sleeve and departed in search of an oculist for his failing eyesight.

A lady with three boys inquired if she might taste just one—she had never seen any before; and after giving a liberal supply to the children walked grinning away. Her face was red with scorn and anger, while the boys set up a howl that woke the policeman from his midday nap in the next street.

The policeman asked casually who had been over as he took a mouthful of "cherries." She spluttered them out with a bad word, snuffed a Bartlett pear into his mouth to remove the taste and remarked emphatically that Pina Colada must be much hotter than Hellgoland.

So the fun went on all morning, but that dealer figures he is in pocket through the little ruse.—[From the Star Monthly.

The Robbers Fled.

At a country store in Mississippi a boy named Fred Henderson, who slept in the store, was awakened one night by the noise made by robbers, who were trying to pry off the shutter of the front window. He had no firearms and he had such a cold that he could not cry.

Something must be done to frighten the robbers away, and after a moment's thought the boy slipped downstairs in his bare feet and got half a dozen cannon firecrackers from a box where they had been stowed away. Tying their fuses together he returned upstairs and softly raised a window and then lighted the fuse and threw the crackers out. There were three robbers and a team of horses, and all ran away at their best pace. Both horses were killed by running into a tree, but the men escaped. The firecrackers answered better than a shotgun.

Contest Department

Here's a slang way of picturing and expressing one of the five senses. The five lots of figures at the top are the numerical positions (in the alphabet) of five letters. Get out your alphabet, find what these letters are, transpose them properly and you will have the slang word that is identical with one of the five senses.

A first prize of $1 is offered for the most successful answer, and a second and a third prize of a book each will be given for the two second best answers.

Answers must be sent in not later than next Thursday, and should be addressed to Contest Department, Children's Page, Courier-Journal.

The prize winners will be announced two weeks later.

Answers must not be sent in the handwriting of parents or elders or written on the typewriter.

Christopher's At Home.

He Receives the Alphabet and Learns a Few Things About Spelling and Punctuation.

BY TUDOR JENKS.

Of course he may have been asleep and have dreamed it all. It's an easy way to explain those odd happenings and queer goings-on that we don't know anything about, to say: "Oh, he dreamed it."

But here's the story, just as Kit told it to me, and Kit is a very wide-awake sort of a lad—he's our shorthand, you know, and we don't have sleepy-heads for shorthand in the Alert Nine, I can tell you.

You see, Kit had to hand in a composition on Friday. Like most boys in the class, he put off writing it until Thursday night, and then he knew he had to do it. So he went into the library—they have a good library room at the Johnsons' (Christopher Johnson is his company name), and he sat down before their big green-tinted table, spread out a lot of commercial note paper, got a pen and dashed right at it.

Kit is a good writer, and he can roll off a composition just like anything. The subject he took was "Columbus' First Voyage." He likes historical subjects, so he took that instead of "My Pets," or "A Day in the Fields," or "My Favorite Game," which were the others.

You see, Kit is a lively sort of boy, and he reads a good many exciting books, and that gives him a style of writing that isn't usual among boys.

I suppose most fellows would have begun this way:

"Christopher Columbus was born in the year so-and-so, in the obscure little town of you-know-it's-name-better-than-I-can-tell-you, and so on.

But Kit likes some things a little better than that. So he got his elbows as far out on each side of him as he could reach, held his pen so tight that it wanted to squeal, bent his head over toward his left shoulder, his tongue out like that of a really fashionable pug, and reeled off this opening sentence:

"Little could the proud Ferdinand brook such insolence from a comparatively unknown adventurer no more he said with heavy disdain the royal gold to wait on thy vane vanquisher and he would have dismissed Columbus without further parley but here the beautiful Isabella beset him to pause for a moment. A boom a boom my legs she cried I have jewels in my coffer. Let me sell them and fit out a vessel. Mayhap we may thus acquire vast domains and convert many heathen."

I copied this word for word from the first page. Kit can spell when he tries, but he spells just anyhow when he's in a hurry.

That was as far as he had written when there came a knock on the door. Now, Kit hoped it was his sister Helen. Helen was always good to Kit, and especially on composition days. Kit fully appreciated what it was to have such a sister.

You see, Helen was one of the study-king kind, and she would look over Kit's compositions and put a little pencil mark opposite the words that she wanted him to look up in the dictionary.

Kit was an honest little fellow, and he told the teacher about it; but she said it was all right so long as Helen didn't write the words out for him.

So saying, he hopped nimbly down from the table and made his way out of the room, followed by the letter and punctuation-marks.

Then Kit went over his work again, and it is really surprising how many excuses Kit found for the visit paid him.

When Helen came in from dancing-school she found Kit had written a very creditable composition.

"Where did you learn to spell and punctuate so well, Kit?" she asked.

"Why, at my 'at home,' and Kit answered; and then he told her of the Master-of-Ceremonies.

"I don't think anybody could forget to put in quotation marks after seeing those little punctuation-marks on the high chairs to hear what was said. Nor could any fellow leave out a period at the end of a sentence, if he had seen that exclusively Mr. Perot sit himself down and draw away from the following sentence. Then there was an exclamation point—an old lady with both hands held up in astonishment—who was all ready to express Ferdinand's disdain for Columbus' rude schemes. I tell you, I am going to get acquainted with these punctuation people, for they're a very interesting lot."

"I think they are," said Helen. And it's really very kind of them to stand around while we read, to explain everything and to tell us just what said everything and how they said it."

"Where did they come from?" asked Kit.

"Oh! they're quite modern, most of them," said Helen. "Some of the older ones have lived many ages, but many are recent. There's the question mark, for instance. He began life as a whole word, so my teacher told me; 'Query,' his name was. Then they gave him a nickname, 'Qy'; and finally he was written just Q, and people forgot that he bore any relation to the letter Q."

"I don't remember that I paid any attention to those little marks, except in school," said Kit; "but school is no school. I'm not the fellow to forget my friends, and I'm going to get the Master-of-Ceremonies to bring the whole of them around to see me some day."

"Then it will be the whole 'Kit and boudle' of them," said Helen, laughing. There! that's what Kit told me about the evening he wrote his composition. I suppose he dreamed it; but it was a funny dream, anyway, and seemed to have a sort of moral to it. Didn't it?"

I know that it has made Kit a good punctuator, if there is any such word. He uses punctuations now. In fact, I have seen a composition of his telling all about the "Conjunction of Jupiter and Venus" that had real colons in it. His teacher said "My stars!" when she saw it, and expressed the wish that all the scholars would punctuate and spell as well as Christopher Johnson did. And then Kit got as red as a beet, and we boys washed his face for him in the snow at recess to keep him from getting too proud. But there's no danger of that. Kit is too good a fellow.

KATHERINE LEE WINSTON.

Helen used to punctuate for him sometimes; for Kit couldn't have patience to put in all the dots and dashes for himself. He said he couldn't bother with them; the interrupted the flow of his ideas.

But it wasn't Helen who had knocked at the library door, as Kit found out when he said "Come in."

The door opened slowly, wider and wider, until it stood wide open. And then a procession came in, led by a courtly little gentleman in small clothes, silk coat and waistcoat, and wearing a rapier at his side. He was only an inch or two tall.

"Permit me," he said, bowing to Kit much as the dancing master does when you come in late, "to introduce myself and my companions. Understanding that you had devoted the evening to letters, I have invited myself to be present, in order to render any assistance that may be in my power."

Suppose I find a place for my eyes. "Won't you and your friends sit down?"

"Thank you, no," answered the leader. "We don't care to delay. We will only take our places where we belong. Let me look at your composition," and the little Master-of-Ceremonies hopped upon the table and began to read it.

When he came to the word that Kit had spelled Isabella, he stopped and pointed it toward the a.

"You're needed here, a," he said.

At once a rotund gentleman came rolling across the room; the a jumped out of the word and O inserted himself in its place.

"Here's an unripe," he said. "That is my place. I've owned that place ever since the Romans accustomed me to it."

"Quite right," said the Master-of-Ceremonies to Kit. "You'll find his title made out plainly in the Latin dictionary."

"I had no wish to keep him out," said Kit. "What shall I do with Mr. A?"

The last question was suggested by seeing that gentleman, who had risen to give place to Mr. O, wandering uneasily over the heads of the other gentlemen, looking a little fuddled down the sheet.

So A, looking much relieved, took the place which I at once yielded to him; Mr. I remarked, "I always feel out of place in those first conjugation derivations. Suppose I find a place for myself in Disandae, a few lines down? If Mr. E will kindly make room for me I will move on the other side of Miss N, there."

This change was soon made, and Mr. E, without saying "By your leave," sat down by Miss T in the word "was," where he felt he was welcome.

"Adventure" no more, read the Master-of-Ceremonies. "Where is my friend Mr. Perot? Here seems to be room for him."

The gentleman inquired for came forward. He resembled Mr. O, but was smaller, and had a much less open countenance. He settled down after the word adventure, but complained of being lonely. Two small boys, who were twins, came forward hand in hand.

"Ah!" said the Master of the Quotation twine. Suppose you two sit down on these high seats just before me. And now I notice you Miss N—there's some mistake. You're in your mother's place. Will Mr. N please come and sit at the head of this row? Suppose I find a place for myself in Disandae, a few lines down? If Mr. E will kindly make room for me I will move on the other side of Miss N, there."

TILLMAN MAKES
BITTER ATTACKDeclares Race Issue Alone
Actuated President.South Carolina Senator Discusses Negro Affair.Purports To Represent Attitude of South.

NOTABLE ADDRESS IN SENATE.

Washington, Jan. 12.—The Senate listened to a debate on the race question to-day in which Senator Tillman was the principal participant and Senator Patterson, of Colorado, his opponent, which brought into striking contrast the ideas of the South and North on this question.

President Roosevelt's action in the Brownsville matter was the subject of discussion. Mr. Tillman held that nothing was involved in it except the race question, and that the present Administration was responsible for the growing acute condition of the race question in the South. The President, he maintained, had encouraged the negro to assert his equality and then had wrought vengeance on a whole battalion for following that encouragement. He condemned the President's action in both respects.

Mr. Patterson defended the President's right to dismiss the troops, but believed there might be some ground to question his policy. He condemned in strong terms what he regarded as the radical position of Mr. Tillman and predicted that the extinction of the Democratic party in the North would follow a continuance of such tactics.

The debate occupied four hours and was listened to with the greatest interest by throngs which filled the galleries by members of the House of Representatives who lined the Senate chamber and by many Senators. On several occasions the galleries had to be warned against applause by the Vice President, who finally threatened to clear them if the offense was repeated.

What Might Happen.

Following a colloquy with Senator Culberson on his position as to the President's authority under the articles of war to discharge the soldiers, Mr. Tillman remarked that none of the negroes discharged would return to Texas.

"One of them," he continued, "that famous sergeant, Mingo Sanders, comes from South Carolina. I would like to meet Mingo and shake his hand. But he is not going back to South Carolina and let me know that he is coming."

"Why not?" interjected Senator Foraker.

"Because the suspicion might prevail as to who really did the killing would make it unhealthy for him down here. I wish it was not so, but I can't help it. If he had been discharged honorably he could have come down there and been the biggest man at negro camp-meetings and received respectful treatment from the whites."

"What would probably happen to him?" persisted Mr. Foraker.

"Oh," ejaculated Mr. Tillman, with evidence of impatience, "I am going to discuss the race question directly," and as the evidence of amusement at his retort subsided, he added:

"Don't you fret, I am going to get right down to the milk in the cocoanut, but I don't want the 'fire alarm' to go off until the bell rings." (Laughter.)

Senator Tillman convulsed the galleries and amused many Senators a minute later by illustrating the discrimination between the races in Washington.

"Negroes are not allowed to drink at all the bars in Washington, as you all know," he said. The last three words were given special emphasis, and the Senator waved his hand to include the whole Senate.

Address Dispassionate.

Mr. Tillman said there were some times when he wished to be dispassionate and deliberate, and he had prepared in writing his discussion of the race question of whether we are to be a confederation or a nation.

"We were," he said, "a nation with a big 'N,' but the Southern half of the country had no conception of the word 'nigger' except as it is connected with the word 'nigger'—and more's the pity."

To a question from Senator Beveridge that a remedy be suggested, Mr. Tillman declined to enter into that phase of the discussion. He said he had arisen from a sick bed to speak and to follow the suggestion of the question would involve another two hours' speech. It had simply been his object to point out that the people of the South were on the crest of a volcano and confronted with a situation of which the people of the North had no conception. As to the Brownsville matter, he stood on the proposition that the innocent ought not to be punished because there were some guilty, "and I think the President has made some very grave blunders in dealing with this subject," he added.

Senator Patterson followed Mr. Tillman, announcing his belief that the President had the legal right to take the action he had, but believed the wisdom or propriety of that action might be open to question. He had no doubt the President was moved from the highest motives, and asserted that the action by the Senator from South Carolina that the President was moved by race prejudice was unjust. He believed the Booker Washington lunch disproved such a conclusion.

The Senate in the next session, he said, would have but two Democratic Senators from the North, and it was his belief that a short time in the future would see the political dividing line completely drawn between the North and South.

Tillman Not Alone.

It was such speeches as had just been delivered, he maintained, which would hasten this condition. Mr. Tillman, he said, was not alone in his advocacy of repealing the Fourteenth and Fifteenth amendments.

"Gov. Vardaman, of Mississippi, and Hoke Smith, soon to be Governor, if he is not already Governor of Georgia," said Mr. Patterson, "have made the same declarations, and there is rapidly being organized a sentiment toward uniting the people of the North and South in the repeal of these constitutional provisions and which will result in a practical return to the condition of peonage for the negro."

Ascertaining that Mr. Patterson had never been in the "black belt" of Alabama or Mississippi, Mr. Tillman suggested that it might be well for him to go down there "and learn something."

When Mr. Patterson explained that his purpose was correctly to state the position of the Northern Democrat as opposed to the radicalism expressed, Mr. Tillman ejaculated:

"Even if there should never be another Democrat elected from the North, the people of the South will stand for white supremacy."

This sentiment brought applause from the galleries. Mr. Patterson maintained that the disfranchisement of the negro simply meant a return to peonage.

"But," again interrupted Mr. Tillman, "the Senator wants us of the South to lift ourselves over the fence with our bootstraps. We could not do that, but we got over the best way we could."

Mr. Patterson continued, insisting that in his belief only a very small minority of the people of the South were in sympathy with the views expressed; that the better element was decidedly against such methods, and he did not believe the people of the North were getting a correct idea of the real situation from lectures delivered in Northern cities by prominent Southerners.

Greeted By Applause.

Mr. Tillman took this reference to apply to himself, and asserted that he had spoken to 100,000 Northerners in his lectures, and that he had received applause and approbation. The character of his audiences, he said, indicated that he was addressing the better element. He concluded his interruption by issuing a challenge to Senator Patterson to debate the race question with him in Colorado, at any time or place.

Mr. Patterson declined the invitation to debate, and said he only wished to point out that both the people of the South and the Democrats of the North had to bear the odium and burden such utterances entailed. This drew a hot retort from Mr. Tillman.

"So far," he said, "as my own party is concerned in the North, it is such a shining example of ward politicians, dirty, low creatures, who use every tactic and all means to buy votes, that I don't care if we never have any of that type to back us up. We have got no use for them."

After the applause in the galleries had died out and the Vice President had warned the audience against applause, Mr. Patterson remarked:

"I will not reply in any way to the last utterance of the Senator from South Carolina."

Mr. Patterson then took up the subject of criminal assaults and lynchings, and read statistics showing that there had been seventy-three lynchings during the year 1906. Thirty-four of these lynchings, he said, were for criminal assaults, and this number did not bear out the impression made prevalent by the constant denunciation of this crime, especially when it was realized that there were more than 10,000,000 in this country. He believed a strict reliance on law would in a large part eradicate this crime.

Indorses President.

At this point Mr. Money called the speaker's attention to the record of one case of criminal assault in Colorado during the year mentioned, for which a negro was burned at the stake by a mob. Mr. Patterson did not justify this, but explained that it occurred in a sparsely-settled section of the State. He indorsed the words of the President in his annual message condemning mob violence.

In this connection, Mr. Money again interrupted to quote from memory a statement in one of President Roosevelt's books, entitled "Roughing It," in which the President justified the lynching of horse thieves in the early days of Idaho. This reference to Idaho brought Senator Heyburn to his feet all races to be judged and treated on the basis of individual merit?

Caste Is Strong.

"Are men to be made over and the caste feeling and race antagonisms centuries to disappear in the universal brotherhood of man? Are there any Senators in this audience who subscribe to this doctrine who would have the Caucasian, highest and noblest of the five races, as is attested by history, descend to the level of the others and share his birthright with them with the inevitable result that pure white blood will disappear from the face of the earth and after the mixing of centuries shall have completed the amalgamation have all men of one skin and one type?"

"Is President Roosevelt ready to act up to his own theory and have his children marry men and women of the other races? Would he accept as a daughter-in-law a Chinese, a Malay, an Indian or a negro in accord with the doctrine laid down in his message which I have quoted? We all know he would not, and while fine words butter no parsnips, words like these are a source of incalculable evil, coming from such a high source.

The Southern white men and women who have for forty years resisted in every possible way this doctrine of the equality of the races are just as resolved now as they have always been not to submit to it or its results. They are resolved to maintain control of their State governments and to prevent in every way possible social and political equality with the inevitable destruction of their civilization which would follow if they yielded.

Conditions Growing Worse.

"The conditions are growing more and more aggravated every day. Race antagonism increases in intensity. Are things to drift until direful tragedies multiply on every hand and blood flows like water?" Is the statesmanship of our time inadequate to cope with this question, just as the statesmanship of 1860 failed to prevent the dire catastrophe of civil war?

"The war was fought to settle the race question, but forty years after its termination we find conditions more threatening in some of their aspects than they were in 1861. It is not possible for me to believe that the theorists and sentimentalists at the North, who are responsible for the conditions existing, will be allowed to pursue their policy of absolute recognition of race equality much further.

"The question is not local nor sectional except so far as the negroes are nearly all at the South. It is high time something was being done to have this great and vital question brought before the country in some practical and sensible way. The deep interest shown in the Brownsville tragedy, is ample evidence that the people of the country are beginning to feel a deep concern in this question, and it is absolutely useless for doctrinaires and politicians to undertake to 'pooh-pooh' the question and dismiss it with a wave of the hand, and for one I am ready to go to battle under the slogan, 'America for the Americans; this is a white man's country and white men must govern it.'"

WILL JEFFRIES REALLY FIGHT AGAIN?

Four Years Since Big Fellow Has Had a Battle—Shifty Man May Defeat Him.

SHOULD James J. Jeffries be lured back to the ring by a fabulous purse history may repeat itself. If he is desirous of his name being handed down from generation to generation in pugilistic history as the American undefeated heavyweight champion he had better stay retired.

It is not likely that a Bill Squires or a Tommy Burns will place the name of Jeffries on the scroll alongside that of Sullivan, but a man of the type of Jim Corbett, whom the great heavyweight would not be fast enough to hit. When John L. Sullivan was matched to meet Corbett in September, 1892, at New Orleans, the sporting public at large ridiculed the match. The knowing ones said that the champion of champions would punch the young Californian full of holes and it was all over but the shouting. But they did not stop to think Sullivan was thirty-four years old and had been out of the ring three years.

The champion was just as strong as ever, but sluggish in his movements. He could not hit Corbett, but he proved his ability to take punishment by standing up for one hour and three minutes, being the loser by a knockout.

Jeffries Thirty-two Next April.

Now Jeffries will be thirty-two years old next April. He has not fought a real contest for nearly four years, his bouts with Jack Monroe not being considered real fights. With his retirement he has gathered about sixty pounds of superfluous flesh, any part of which would be a hindrance in a ring contest. Students of the game know why Jeffries retired to the farm life to live as close to nature as possible do not believe that the big bullfighter can ever get into condition to stand a long, fast fight such as he did on May 11, 1901, when he beat Jim Corbett in the twenty-third round.

Up to the twenty-third round in that fight Jeffries was not better than Sullivan in the hands of the Californian. Try as he would and he could not catch Corbett with either a lead or counter. Corbett got careless in the twenty-third round, allowed Jeffries to crowd him into a corner against the ropes, and a full left-hand swing on the jaw sent the Californian rolling down and out. His head struck the floor heavily and he rolled over in a vain attempt to regain his feet. It was the first effective blow that Jeffries ever landed in one hour and nine minutes of fighting.

Cannot Regain Old Speed.

With all the training that he may resort to he cannot regain the speed of 1901, and if he should meet a man of Corbett's cleverness he will be bound to finish his ring career the same as Sullivan. Men of the Bill Squires or the Tommy Burns type would be pie for Jeffries, even in his untrained condition. The fellow who knows nothing of leg boxing, but who will go in and mix it up with the big bullfighter at the top of the bell, will get a quick defeat. If all arrangements mapped out by the Californian and Nevada promoters dovetail, Burns and O'Brien will settle their differences early in May, and Jeffries and Squires will meet at that time.

Weight, when not coupled with speed and perfect physical condition, counts for very little in a twenty-four-hour fight. The man who has the skill, brains and generalship at his command, who is able to think and act quickly, has the slight beaten to a standstill, providing he is patient and bides his time.

Fighter Against Dozer.

Now, on the presumption that Jeffries will beat Squires and that O'Brien will be returned the winner over Burns, the big, ponderous, sluggish fighter is due to be pitted against the agile, cat-like boxer. If the latter trains carefully and thoroughly for the bout, which at its ending would scarcely be before the waning days of 1907, Jeffries will be thirty-two years old. Sullivan's history may repeat itself, O'Brien in the meantime must curb his impetuous disposition, and if he is lucky enough to beat Burns and obtain the match with Jeffries he should fear a year out of Jim Corbett's training book and follow it to the letter.

CRANKS PART OF THE SPORT

Fans Recognized As Important Factor In Winning Pennants.

SOME OF THE NOTED ROOTERS.

Many Actors Have Become Famous In the Dyed-In-the-Wool Band of Enthusiasts.

DIGBY BELL AT THE HEAD.

THE baseball crank has become recognized as an integral part of the national game. His enthusiasm and sympathy are to the ball player, or what the applause of the audience is to the actor. There are different degrees of baseball cranks, and they are known under the various names of "Cranks," "Fan," "Dug" and "Thirty-third Degree Rooters." Every community has them, but occasionally the striking individuality of a baseball crank gives him distinctive reputation and position. Cincinnati has any number of the deepest-dyed cranks. Considering the kind of team they had to "root" for last season, one and all are entitled to gold medals.

The pure and undiluted type of "rooter" is now recognized as an absolute power to his baseball team. This fact was thoroughly establishing during the world's championship series four seasons ago, between the Pittsburghs, of the National League, and the Boston, of the American League. The Pittsburghs won the first two out of three Boston games, and when the two teams left to play the remainder of the series in Pittsburgh the hope of winning the series had almost entirely left the Boston team.

Attended the Game.

Even Tim Murnane, Jake Morse and other well-known baseball writers admitted that the Smoky City players were likely to win, but the Boston "rooters" had not given up hope. About 100 of "him" went to Pittsburgh with the team. They hired a band of music and from the moment of their arrival made things howl.

On every possible occasion the band would play "Teele," and the rooters would sing an overwhelming chorus. They would play the players with something of their own unbounded spirit, and the latter finally won out in what seemed to be a hopeless contest.

At the head of all baseball cranks stands Digby Bell, the actor. His unique position may be said to have received official recognition away back in 1889. When the Chicago and All-American baseball players returned from the tour of the world they were given a banquet at Delmonico's in New York, at which were such renowned speakers as Mark Twain and the famous orator, the late Daniel Daugherty, of Philadelphia, and others of like note.

The honor of delivering a poem welcoming the players and their fellow back to America fell to him. It was entitled "Twenty Miles Away," a parody on "Sherman's Ride," and since has become a baseball classic.

A Boston Crank.

Boston has a wonder in a little business man named Dixwell, who accompanied that team on every trip, and on account of his peculiar cry of "Hill, hill," whenever his team made a good play, he was known as "Hill Hill Dixwell." He was a good sport, for when the Giants beat the Boston for the championship in 1888 in the series with Conners, he presented each one of the New York players with a little scarf-pin to commemorate their triumph.

But the cranks were most resplendent at that period in New York. There was quite a bunch of them, at least four of whom enjoyed a national reputation. They were Digby Bell, DeWolf Hopper, Nick Engle and "Judge" Cullum. It was an enjoyable ordinary matter for any one of these to jump a train at New York for Chicago or some other distant city in order to see their favorites play. They had regular seats at the Polo grounds, which were reserved for them with padlock and chain, and to which they held the key.

The "Judge" as Cullum was known, was from the South, in the molasses business, and might have weighed any from 250 to 300 pounds. His spirit was roused from the very drop of the bat, and in the early spring he would make trips from New York to the Southern cities when the Giants were in training, and he would be lining up and note the caliber of the new players who had joined them.

Digby Bell's Titles.

Digby Bell enjoyed at that time a variety of titles, such as "King of Cranks," "The Father of the Fierce Fiends," and other expressive titles which the imaginative baseball writers coined for him from time to time. Bell's celebrations in 1889 made him conspicuous. That was the year when Buck Ewing's team out of New York to beat the team out for one game, the result not being settled until the very last day of the season.

On that day the Bostonians played in Pittsburgh, and the New Yorks in Cleveland. Had the Bostonians won and the New Yorks lost the former would have won the National championship for the year. There has probably been no year in the history of baseball when New York was so excited over a championship contest as at that time.

Digby Bell is not as happy this year as he has been in some other, because the Giants were second in the National League race, but despite the loss of prestige this year, Bell still regards Monday as his day.

With all the training that he may resort to he cannot regain the speed of 1901, and if he should meet a man of Corbett's cleverness he will be bound to finish his ring career the same as Sullivan. Men of the Bill Squires or the Tommy Burns type would be pie for Jeffries, even in his untrained condition. If all arrangements mapped out by the Californian and Nevada promoters dovetail, Burns and O'Brien will settle their differences early in May, and Jeffries and Squires will meet at that time.

Weight, when not coupled with speed and perfect physical condition, counts for very little in a twenty-four-hour fight. The man who has the skill, brains and generalship at his command, who is able to think and act quickly, has the slight beaten to a standstill, providing he is patient and bides his time.

WHY ALTROCK IS HARD TO DEFEAT

Selee Tells Secret of Pitcher's Success At the Slab.

FEW BASES STOLEN ON HIM.

O'Day Says He Could Catch Runners Napping, But Ewing Would Not Allow It.

GOOD GOSSIP OF BASEBALLDOM.

"NICK" ALTROCK is one of the hardest pitchers in the world to beat, because he doesn't give base runners a chance to steal on him.

Selee, the former manager of the Cubs, during a fanning bee at the Western League meeting recently, Mr. Selee, who has always been one of the closest observers in baseball and one of the most interesting talkers on the national game, pointed out in concise manner the big advantage Altrock has over an opposing team.

"In the first place," said the veteran manager, "Altrock has almost perfect control. That means you have got to hit the ball to get to first. Secondly, you can't steal on him, because he watches first like a hawk and has a wonderful snap throw to the base which does not permit a runner to get more than two steps away from the base without great danger of getting caught."

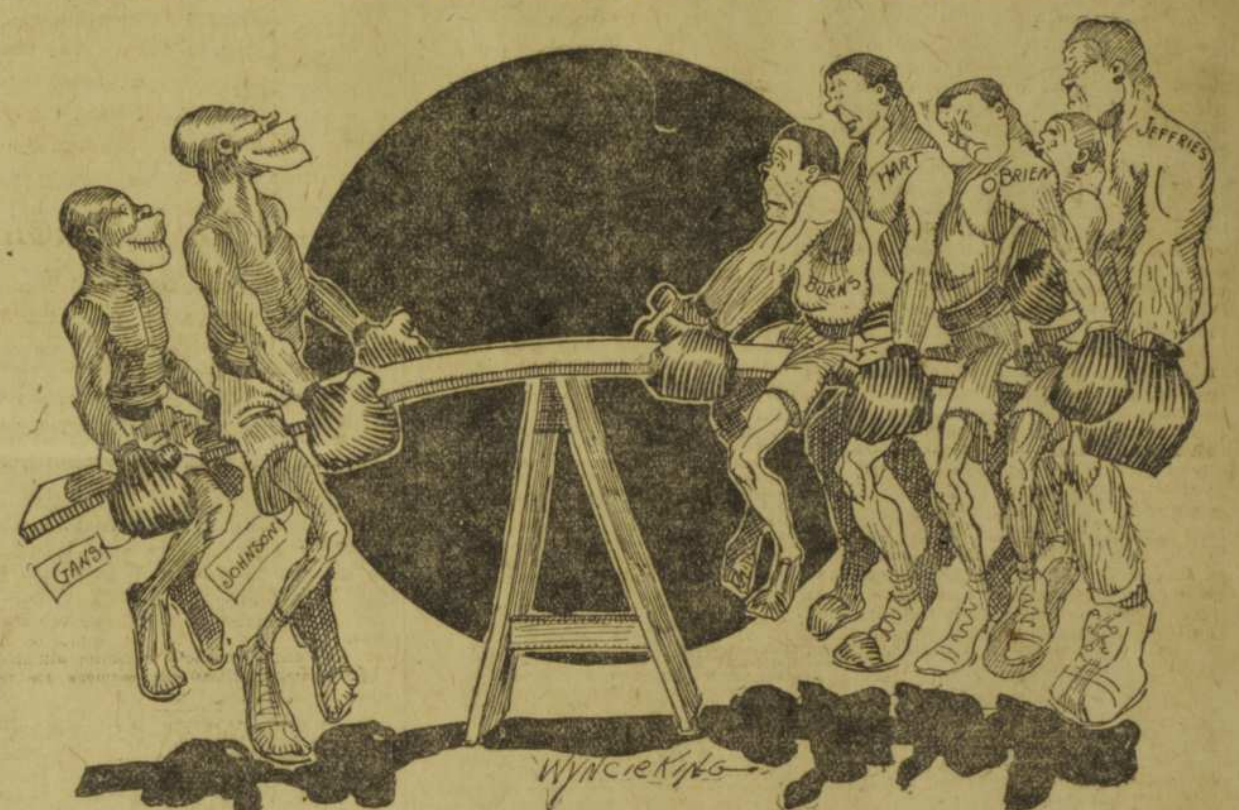

"There are several pitchers in the game who have more speed and better curves than Altrock, but who don't win as many games. Nick more than makes up for his lack of speed and curves by his great fielding, his accurate control and his attention to men on the bases. It has been the same for years. Good left-handers who kept the runners close to first were always winners."

Runners Forced At Second.

"Against that kind of pitching a team is at a horrible disadvantage. You can't steal bases, and the hit-and-run play is easily broken up. When the runners are kept hugging first force plays at second base occur with greater frequency and the infielders are given more time to pull off double plays."

"When a team can't steal bases it isn't going to win very often, and there are mighty few runners who can pilfer second on Altrock. Doc White, of the Sox, is almost as good in watching the bases, although his throw to first is not as good as Nick's. Where White shines is in his deceptive delivery. He delivers the ball but every time in such a puzzling manner that the runner on first is fooled into going back to that base, expecting a throw there from the pitcher.

"Not enough pitchers cultivate that short throw to first. There are several good left-handers who watch first as closely as Altrock, but they don't catch the runners off there because it takes them too long to throw the ball. If they would shorten up their throw base runners wouldn't dare take any bigger lead off them than they do off Altrock."

Prepared For Sox Victory.

Mr. Selee's remarks about the Sox pitchers were occasioned by a discussion of the world's series between the Sox and the Cubs. "I rather looked for the Cubs to win," said Mr. Selee, "but it appeared too close a proposition to wager any money on, and I advised people who asked me what to do to stay off. White and Altrock make a hard pair to beat, and while I didn't see the series, I hear Walsh's last ball was even harder for the Cubs to solve."

Umpire Henry O'Day had a funny complaint to make about why he was never able to get a reputation for keeping men close to the bases during the days when he was a National League umpire. "I had a half-back motion," said O'Day, "that was a cooler to base runners, but my catcher wouldn't let me use it. He wanted everybody that reached first to try to steal second, and always did so, let them get as gay as they pleased around first, so they would be encouraged to try for second."

Ewing Hoped Men Would Run.

"Buck Ewing was my catcher. 'Let 'em go, Hank,' he used to say to me; 'that's the surest way of getting them out.' And it was, too. All I had to do when I thought a runner was going to attempt to steal was to throw the ball while the batsman couldn't reach it. The ball through the box only about five feet off the ground, and if the pitcher didn't get out of the way the game would be finished without him. The way that man shot a ball to second base was a caution."

"But what Selee says about the importance of keeping men close to the bases goes for me, too. That's right. Almost all of the successful pitchers have owed much of their success to watching the bases. Those old-timers, Matt Kilroy and Tom Ramsey, were wonders at catching runners fat-footed off the bases. There never will be a better pitcher to stop base runners than Ramsey, but had a lightning-quick throw like Altrock's, and he could put the ball right on the runner over time."

"Grif" and "Cal" Were Good.

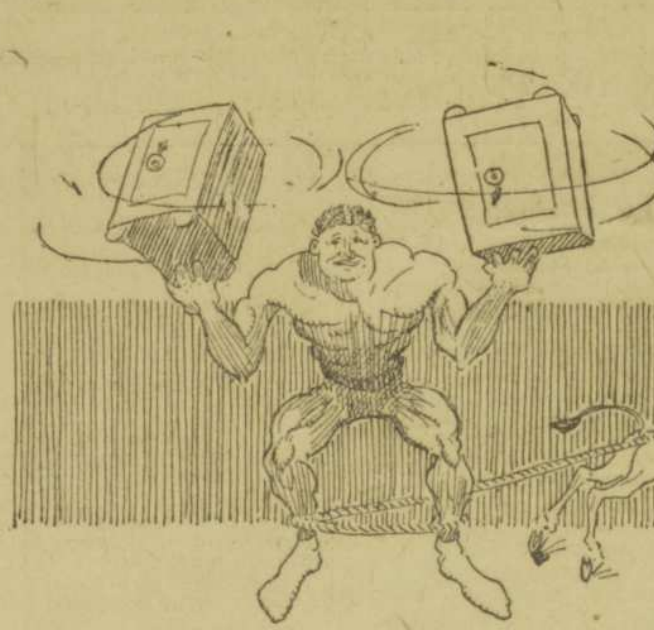

Griffith and Cullahan, although right-handers, were skilled in catching runners napping. Both of them had a half-back motion, but got away with it. They were fast throwers and quick thinkers, and usually knew just when a runner was going to start a steal. Half of the big league pitchers of to-day could increase their number of games won by from 10 to 25 per cent if they would practice catching men off base."

Umpire O'Day gave a plausible reason for the failure of so many "phenom" pitchers to make good in the major leagues. "A big part of undeveloped Mathewsons came into the major leagues every year from the minors, and a mighty small percentage of them quite good," said O'Day. "Their friends from the small league towns wonder why their nets fail to cause the same site in the big leagues they didn't in the 'brush' organizations. The reason is that the reputations made by these 'phenoms' were helped along by the poor batsmen."

Gilbert With Newark.

New York, Jan. 12.—William Gilbert, who last season played second base for the New York National League baseball team, will play with the Newark team, in the Eastern League, according to an announcement made to-day. Gilbert's place on the New York team has not yet been filled.
